Red Troops Are Reported Approaching Yugoslavia

Armored Divisions Have Begun Moving To Romanian Line In Last 48 Hours

By Gaston Coblentz

Belgrade, Aug. 30 (NYHT).—Elements of two Soviet armored divisions were reported tonight by highly qualified sources to be approaching the Yugoslav-Romanian frontier from points within Romania.

Soviet aviation units also are associated with the Russian movement, which has begun within the last 48 hours, it was learned.

There is no possibility that this information is the result of rumors originated by the Communist Information Bureau (Cominform), nor is it based on evidence of unreliable or alarmist observers.

The moves coincided with the announcement by Radio Moscow tonight of another Russian note to the Yugoslav government, one of the most hostile so far, in which the Kremlin accused Belgrade of "treachery" and "double-dealing."

Five Soviet Divisions

The Soviet troops, moving westward in Romania, have been located establishing their headquarters in the region around Timisora, 40 miles east of the Yugoslav-Romanian border in northwestern Romania. This location is close to one full and two incomplete Russian armored divisions known to have arrived in southeastern Hungary within the last two days.

This means that the better part of five Soviet divisions are aligned in an arc encircling the northeastern corner of Yugoslavia.

However, there is unwillingness on the part of Yugoslav leaders and diplomatic observers here to believe the Russians intend a military invasion of this country. The Yugoslav government still was believed not to be taking any special defense measures in the form of unusual troop movements near its borders.

"Malicious Deserters"

[Moscow's new note accused Tito and his lieutenants of being malicious deserters and informed them "they cannot expect courtesy and even less so respect from the Soviet government," the Associated Press reported.

[The note made no mention of Yugoslavia's offer of August 23 to settle their feud—provided Russia recognized the Balkan state's determination to stay independent in all her policies.

[Russia said the Yugoslav gov-

New Far Eastern Policy Seen in Bid For Indian Accord

By the United Press

President Truman has moved to halt the spread of communism in Asia by appealing to India and Pakistan to settle their bitter dispute over the rich Kashmir state, it was disclosed last night.

His action was construed in high quarters as the first step in carrying out a new Far Eastern policy. Its purpose is to prevent Communist expansion to south and southeast Asia by eliminating unrest and bolstering the democratic governments in those areas.

Sources close to the White House said Mr. Truman warned that the dispute involves a "grave threat to peace in all of southeast Asia" and expressed hope that it could be settled at the earliest moment possible.

Red Embassy's Fleeing Flier Back in Austria, U. S. Guest

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

A "missing flier mystery" launched by the Russian Embassy yesterday over disappearance of a Red army pilot deserter bumped to an anticlimax five hours later.

The State Department disclosed the aviator is back in Austria, first stop on his earlier flight to freedom, and may go on home if he wishes.

Lieut. Anatoly P. Barsov, was picked up on 16th st. nw., by Immigration and Naturalization Service agents August 17, a few moments after he left the Russian Embassy where he had been making arrangements for "forgiveness" and return home.

The Federal Government moved him to Ellis Island and then to Austria where, the State Department said, "Barsov is now being given an opportunity freely to decide whether he wishes to return to the Soviet Union or remain under American jurisdiction in Europe."

Free to Go Back Home

"If, apparently of his own free will, he desires to return," the State Department continued, "no difficulties will be put in his way."

Lieut. Barsov and Lieut. Peter Pirigov, together with a Russian sergeant, crash-landed their Soviet plane last October 9 at an American Army occupation field near Linz, Austria. They told authorities they had been listening to the Voice of America broadcasts and wanted to visit the United States, particularly the State of Virginia.

Czech Revolt Smashed by Red Regime

Plot to Overthrow Government Blamed On 'Western Power'

Prague, Aug. 30 (AP).—Czechoslovakia's Communist government announced today it had smashed an armed revolt by a large number of conspirators, who tried to seize the capital and set up an anti-Soviet regime.

The official account claimed the plotters were "under the direction of a certain Western imperialist power," and that a copy of their plan of action was deposited with an unnamed Western embassy in Prague by the conspirators.

The government said the revolt already was in motion when police seized armed rebels who had gathered at their pre-arranged concentration point.

Accused Tried In Secret

Authorities said they already had tried and sentenced the accused participants in secret.

Six men were sentenced to death. Ten others, including three women, got life sentences. Prison terms ranging from 1 to 25 years at hard labor were imposed on an unspecified number, and 10 others were acquitted.

It was the second such secret conviction of alleged terrorists announced in the last four days. On Saturday the government disclosed that the state court at Melnik had sentenced a nine-man band of alleged terrorists to terms of four years to life for trying to overthrow the government.

Embassies Surprised

Spokesmen for Western embassies in Prague said they were "as surprised as anyone could be" by the story of the plot and the charge that a Western power was involved.

"We know nothing about it," the Americans said. "It is news to us." The British and French echoed this statement.

The official government version spoke of the involvement of "hysterical women" and some women plotters who allegedly "seduced Boy Scouts in order to use them later in the gang's armed action."

It was explained that the plan was: Seizure of strategic points in the capital; liquidation or arrest of government leaders; expansion of the revolt throughout the country coincident with proclamations of

Senate Foes Compromise On Arms Aid

Rival Party Leaders Reportedly Agree to Cut Fund to 1 Billion

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senate Democratic and Republican leaders in foreign and military policy yesterday reached a compromise settlement of the foreign military assistance dispute which had precipitated the gravest breach in bipartisan foreign policy ranks since the war.

The conferees reportedly agreed to cut to an even billion the $1,160,990,000 sought for arms aid to the European members of the Atlantic Alliance. The slash had been suggested by Senators Arthur H. Vandenberg (R., Mich.) and John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.), GOP foreign policy spokesman in the Senate.

The details of the compromise were not made public, pending a meeting of the full committees today, but generally the settlement was said to have been along lines suggested by Vandenberg.

The subcommittee which worked out the compromise was appointed by Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Foreign Relations

Rescuers Find 14 Of 15 on B-29 O. K. In Spokane Crash

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 30 (AP).—A B-29 bomber crashed in wild hill country above the Spokane River today but only one of the 15 airmen aboard appeared lost. The others parachuted to safety.

The Spokane Air Force Base said one of the 14 parachutists had been injured, but the extent of his injuries was not known.

The Air Force spokesman said officers who had arrived at the scene of the crash were "fairly certain" the missing airman was not in the wreckage.

A fire broke out in the timber on the river bank shortly after the plane crashed. The smoke served as a guide to search planes from the base but hampered rescue workers on the ground as they sought the scattered crew members.

The rescued crew members were taken to Wellpinit, Wash., and returned to the Spokane base by ambulance for physical examinations.

Lucas Moves For Senate Session End

Reciprocal Trade Compromise, Parley With GOP on Must Bills in Works

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Senate Democratic leaders yesterday refused to set any definite adjournment date for the "walkathon" Senate, but put out two feelers that could lead to a quick wind-up of the session.

1. Majority Leader Lucas (Ill.) said he would relay to President Truman today a proposed reciprocal trade compromise that might shorten debate as much as two weeks. The compromise would simply extend until next spring the old law, which expired June 30, GOP "peril points" and all.

2. Lucas said he may lay before Republican leaders next week a definite legislative program for the balance of the session and ask a limitation of debate on each scheduled "must" bill.

Only when and if the Senate agrees to restrict its own talk on each of the measures will it be possible to set an adjournment target, Lucas told newsmen.

Lucas Lists "Must" Bills

Following a Democratic policy committee conference, he tentatively listed these bills as "must": Minimum wage, reciprocal trade, military assistance to Europe, liberalization of the displaced persons law, farm legislation, military, Government and executive pay bills.

Civil rights legislation was not on the list, but Lucas said that did not mean it was barred. He said other bills may be added "before we sit down and talk it over with Republican leaders."

Wherry to Cooperate

Senate Republican Leader Wherry (Nebr.) promised "100 per cent cooperation." He said he had long urged Lucas to lay down a definite program, promising in return that the Republicans would help work out a debate limitation.

A six-day Labor Day holiday meanwhile was approved by the Democratic policymakers on one condition: that the Senate pass the long-pending 75-cent-an-hour minimum wage bill before it recesses tonight.

Passage of the wage bill would knock the first "must" off the list. After two three-day recesses, the Senate would return next Wednesday to tackle the second, reciprocal trade act extension.

Trade Bill "Peril Points"

Trade act compromise talk started up after Republicans threatened a two-week fight to revive GOP "peril points" written into the old law by the Eightieth Congress.

Under the expired statute, the Tariff Commission recommends set points below which tariffs should not be cut. This is not binding on the President, but if he exceeds a

Three More Bridges Eyed For Potomac

Planners' Parley Hears of Proposals To Handle Traffic For Next 30 Years

By Robert P. Jordan
Post Reporter

Proposals for eventual construction of three new bridges across the Potomac came to light yesterday at a conference called to smooth traffic snarls at spans linking the District and Virginia.

The National Capital Park and Planning Commission disclosed that its still-unpublished master plan for the area will recommend to the Governments of the District, Maryland and Virginia that bridges be constructed:

1. From 2d and Washington sts., Alexandria, to a point near Shepherds Landing in the Blue Plains area of Southeast Washington, connecting with a proposed by-pass highway of the District.

2. From Nebraska ave. nw., straight across the Potomac to Virginia to join the new George Washington Memorial Parkway in Arlington.

3. From Cabin John, Md., over the Potomac to Fairfax County, Virginia, to link Maryland's projected Northwest freeway from Rockville to the Shirley hwy. in Arlington. The freeway also is to by-pass Washington.

Revealed in Letter

The proposal to build the three bridges was revealed in a letter from John Nolen, jr., the commission's planning director, to the American Automobile Association, which sponsored yesterday's luncheon conference.

Additional details were furnished to a reporter by J. R. McKeever, city planner for the NCPPC. McKeever said need for the bridges would increase with continued growth of the metropolitan area. He predicted the bridges would be built within 30 years.

More immediately, Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks—the NCPPC's sister agency—announced plans to channel prevailing traffic during morning and evening rush hours into four of the six lanes over Memorial Bridge.

To do this, he said, his agency will ask funds in its next budget to eliminate the traffic circle at the Virginia end of the span and the triangle at the District end. Removal of the islands would permit four-and-two-lane traffic, presently impossible, he said.

Would Resurface Span

Root told some 25 traffic experts who attended the conference that funds also will be sought to resurface the bridge, allowing greater speed in safety. He predicted opening of the Whitehurst freeway October 1 will relieve Memorial Bridge conges-

He charges her with "cruel and inhuman" treatment
Harris & Ewing

An absolute divorce was asked yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court by Melville Bell Grosvenor, son of the president of the National Geographic Society, from his wife, Helen Rowland Grosvenor.

They were married January 4, 1924, according to the complaint in his suit, and have been separated since February 16, 1948.

Grosvenor charged his wife with neglect, "cruel and inhuman" treatment, and "failure to conduct herself as a wife."

The family home, which they still own, is at 2901 Woodland dr. nw., according to the complaint and an attached property settlement agreement. However, Grosvenor said he recently has lived at 600 Grosvenor lane and Mrs. Grosvenor at 3031 Sedgwick st. nw. He is the son of Gilbert Grosvenor, and a grandson of Alexander Graham Bell. He is an assistant editor of the National Geographic Magazine.

MAJOR GENERAL HARRY H. VAUGHAN

Text of Vaughan Statement

(Following is the text of Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan's statement to the Senate "5-percenter" committee.)

I am glad to appear as a witness before this committee, and to make a statement on the matters in which I have been mentioned in recent testimony here.

I have the honor of serving as military aide to the President. My association with President Truman covers a period of some 30 years. Since 1941, except for my overseas duty with the Army, I have served him as secretary, and later as military aide. By reason of this experience, my duties in serving the President have not been limited to military matters but have also included other administrative functions.

Inquiries from persons having business with various Government agencies come to my attention in my capacity as a member of the White House staff. The steps taken by me in response to such inquiries have been for the purpose of assisting people in transacting business with the appropriate agencies of their Government. In most such cases the people I assisted were not friends of mine in any way; in a few cases the people involved had been known to me, or were old friends.

IN ALL such matters I followed the practice of extending aid whenever that could properly be done. At no time have I tried to cause a Government official to take any action which he did not consider proper and in the best interests of the Government.

Insofar as I have given such assistance to any business concerns or their representatives, it has been without any participation by the President in any way, either through approval, or any knowledge on his part, of the

Senator Will Call Meeting to Learn 'What People Want'

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senator Matthew M. Neely, the veteran West Virginia Fair Deal Democrat, yesterday became head of the Senate District Committee and immediately announced plans for a big round-table meeting "to find out what the people of Washington want done."

He told reporters he will invite representatives of every civic organization in Washington to the Capitol this week, or if the Senate takes its expected recess, shortly after the Labor Day holiday.

Neely, who will be 75 in November but is among the spryest members of the Senate, said he wants the organizations to tell him not only what they want done but whether they are willing to cooperate in the job.

Organizations Listed

He listed these organizations as among those he hopes will attend the round table: the AFL, the CIO, the United Mine Workers, the railroad brotherhoods, the Board of Trade, the Junior Board of Commerce, the Federation of Citizens Associations, the Federation of Civic Associations, and the newspapers. He said he meant no slight

Senate Votes Wage, Hour Law Curbs

Plan Would Exempt Some Workers Now Covered by the Act

The Senate overrode Administration leaders last night and voted to exempt from coverage of the wage and hour law some workers now covered. Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) estimated the number at 200,000.

The Senate accepted by a 50-to-23 roll-call vote an amendment by Senator Holland (D., Fla.) to limit the number of employes of retail and service establishments covered by the act.

The vote was taken at a night session held in an effort to speed final action on a bill to hike the present minimum wage of 40 cents an hour to 75 cents. A few minutes later, a recess was called until Wednesday.

A bill to boost the wage floor already passed by the House includes an amendment identical with that offered by Holland.

Taft Disputes Pepper's Figures

Senator Pepper, leading the fight against the amendment, said it would have the effect of "clarifying the law all right but at the expense of 200,000 workers" now covered.

Both Holland and Senator Taft (R., Ohio) disputed that. They said the amendment would simply reaffirm what Congress originally in-

Maragon, Helis Gave After Favors, General Says

Speeded Tanforan Track Permit for 'Golden Greek,' Never Took Fees

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide, stopped puffing on his cigar in a jam-packed Senate committee room yesterday, and said, yes, it was true that two men for whom he had done favors had given him campaign contributions for the Democratic Party.

He credited John Maragon and William Helis, sr., with contributions of something like $4000.

The record of the Senate's 5-percenter inquiry already was crowded with accounts of favors that General Vaughan did for Maragon, the one-time Greek immigrant boy who became a White House habitue.

Speeded Race Track Permit

It also contained the story of how General Vaughan, at the request of Helis, asked the housing expediter to "hurry up" a decision in the case of the Tanforan race track, for which a Government construction permit was being sought. Helis, known as the "Golden Greek," lives in Beverly Hills, Calif., and owns a stable of race horses.

General Vaughan, who earlier had defended his record as a public servant, told the Senators that he was the "go-between" or "messenger" in the case of the campaign contributions, passing them along to the Democratic organization in President Truman's home State of Missouri for the elections of 1946.

That was the year that Mr. Truman waged his so-called "purge" campaign against Roger Slaughter, a Democrat, who represented the Kansas City district in the House of Representatives.

Gave Money to Organization

Slaughter had opposed some New Deal reforms. The President at a White House news conference, said of Slaughter: If he's right, I'm wrong. He then came out for Enos Axtell, who, with the aid of the Pendergast organization, whipped Slaughter in the Democratic primary election in August.

Axtell was beaten the following November by Albert Reeves, jr., the Republican nominee.

General Vaughan, in answer to questions yesterday, said he simply turned the campaign contribu-

Million Watch Legion Parade In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, Aug. 30 (AP).—A million people cheered and applauded today for American Legion veterans of two World Wars strutting in one of their biggest, noisiest and most colorful parades.

Business and traffic in the Nation's third largest city slowed to a crawl shortly before noon when the first parade unit stepped off down Broad st.

The last of Pennsylvania's 10,000 marchers, final department in the line, reached the end of the march at 10:05 p. m., 12 hours after the parade started.

Keeping step with the 150 bands and bugle and drum corps were crack drill units of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Air Force, Wacs and Waves.

Many Legionnaires carried symbols representing their States—sagebrush for Nevada, corn for Iowa, sombreros for Texas. There was even a Santa Claus from Santa Claus, Ind.

The parade was the only official Legion business for today. Wednesday, the 6600 convention delegates and alternates will take up more serious matters, including consideration of resolutions that will set forth Legion policy on world and domestic affairs.

Also scheduled for Wednesday are speeches by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Veterans Administrator Carl R. Gray, jr.

Vaughan Admits Taking Campaign Contributions From Men He Helped

tions over to the Democratic organization in Missouri. Asked specifically whether the money was used in Kansas City, he said he did not know.

He said that Maragon gave him contributions of "not over $2000," including a check for $1000 from George Skouris.

Surprisingly Well Mannered

He said that Helis gave him $2000 or $3000.

The revelation about these 1946 campaign contributions came suddenly at the hearing before the Senate Investigations subcommittee, and overshadowed all that had gone before.

General Vaughan, President Truman's close friend for 31 years, turned out to be a surprisingly mild-mannered witness. The eyes of 40 cameras—still and movie—were trained on him as he took his elevated seat in Room 357 of the Senate Office Building. The spectators were four deep near the door.

Ribbons Adorn Chest

He was in uniform; over his right shoulder hung the golden aiguillette of a presidential aide and, beneath it, the blue and white patch of the 35th Division. His chest was covered with rows of vari-colored ribbons, symbolic of his service in World War I and World War II. There were four battle stars on his ribbon for World War I, in which he twice won the Silver Star for gallantry in action.

General Vaughan had read a statement at the outset, saying he had discharged his duties as White House aide "honestly" and to the best of his ability; he had admitted that part of his explanation about the deep-freezers may have been in "error," and had stated emphatically that President Truman wasn't interested in any detail of John Maragon's "business or life or anything."

Would Do Same Again

He had called Maragon a "Senate Office Building character" and had evoked laughter by saying that Maragon didn't "reprimand easy."

But when the showdown came he said that he would again recommend Maragon for the State epartment job he once helped to get for him in Greece.

He said, also, that he would do over again what he did in the Tanforan race track business—that is, arrange an appointment for Helis and his friends with the housing expediter and try himself to speed action on a decision with respect to a construction permit.

General Vaughan was going along, answering softly and occasionally puffing on a cigar, when Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) suddenly fired this question at him:

No Fee, But Campaign Gifts

"Mr. Vaughan (Senator McCarthy insisted on addressing the aide as Mister) you never got any fee, of course, in connection with the Tanforan deal.

"No, sir," said Vaughan.

"Did you ever get any money from Maragon?"

"No, I never did.

"You are sure Maragon never came to you and gave you an envelope, gave you any money of any kind."

'No, he never did."

McCarthy reached for his inside pocket as if to extract something from it.

General Vaughan made an abrupt correction.

"He may have yes—yes, yes," he said.

"Would you tell us about it?" McCarthy said.

"He collected some campaign money. Mr. Maragon collected some . . . Mr. Helis . . . I got some direct. And I turned it over to Mr. Roy Harper, who was the State chairman in Missouri."

Recipient Now Judge

(Harper has since been made a Federal judge.)

Senator McCarthy wanted to know whether Maragon collected a sizeable amount of money from the people interested in "the race track deal."

"No," said Vaughan, "I am sure he did not. I was under the impression that he collected it from various friends of his, Greek Americans, that were in this society with him and Mr. Helis. That is where Mr. Helis got the money that he gave to me."

"You understand that under the Missouri law that you must file a statement when you make such contributions?"

"Well, I did not know that the go-between, the messenger, had to file a statement."

"Now, can you tell us, roughly, how much money Mr. Maragon collected for you during this campaign?"

"Probably not over $2000."

Who Is Frankie Costello?

"Did he ever at one time give you a contribution as high as $1000 from one man?"

"Yes, he gave me a check from Mr. George Skouris."

Senator McCarthy paused and then resumed with this question:

"I want to ask you a question, Mr. Vaughan, and I wish you would give it considerable thought before you answer: Will you tell us whether or not Maragon at any time gave you money that he claimed was from Frankie Costello?"

"Who?" Vaughan asked.

"Frankie Costello."

"Am I supposed to know Frankie Costello?"

"I am just asking you. If you don't know, tell us.

"I never heard of him, to my knowledge. May I ask who is Frankie Costello?"

Denies Gift From Costello

McCarthy started to explain what bearing Costello had on the matter at hand.

"I would like to know," the lawmaker said, "where Maragon got the money he gave to you; I would like to know how much. Frank Costello is a rather famous . . ."

General Vaughan broke in.

"Oh," he said, "the New York gangster?"

McCarthy said that was right.

"Oh, I didn't connect him," said Vaughan. "I didn't know how he got in here."

"Now you know," McCarthy persisted. "Will you tell us whether or not some of that money . . . "

"I am sure," said Vaughan, interrupting, "that if Maragon had told me that he got money from that individual I would certainly remember."

"Your thought now is that he didn't."

"That he certainly did not."

"Will you try now and think, as hard as you can, and tell us whether or not any of the funds came from any of the men, other than Helis, whom you had befriended, either race track deals, War Assets deals, or any other kind of deals?"

"None that I remember. I collected none from any that are tied up with these various fields . . . William Helis. . . ."

"Do you know how much he gave you?"

"No, I can't recall. I think it was two or three thousand dollars, though."

McCarthy wanted to know when Helis gave his contribution, how soon after Tanforan was given a Government permit to acquire scarce building materials.

"This was during the campaign," Vaughan said. "Whether it was in the primary or—I imagine it was in the general campaign in October."

Questioned About Hunt

McCarthy then asked Vaughan about James V. Hunt, who has been described as the "star" of the 5-percenter inquiry because of the large business he did in representing businessmen before Government agencies.

"And how much money did you get from Mr. Hunt in the fall of 1946? McCarthy asked.

"I don't recall ever getting any money from Mr. Hunt," said Vaughn. "I don't know whether Mr. Hunt is financially able to give to campaigns, and I don't even know what his politics are."

The spectators, having heard earlier about Hunt's big fees, burst into laughter at this.

McCarthy recalled Hunt's letters during and after the 1948 Presidential campaign, his statement that he would be better off than before if Gov. Thomas E. Dewey won and his post-election statement that he had been rooting for President Truman all along.

"Don't Reprimand Easy"

Senator Mundt (R., S. Dak.), took over and asked General Vaughan if Maragon ever used his White House office as "a sort of headquarters for operations."

"Well," said General Vaughan, "Mr. Maragon pops in frequently—did—used my outside office telephone. How long he had done that before it came to my attention I do not know . . . So I instructed that that would be discontinued as of that date, and I instructed John, and, of course, he said, 'Oh, I—' . . . he had a very plausible explanation for the few times he had done it. He discontinued it then."

"Did John ever visit your office after that or was that reprimand sufficient to keep him away?" Mundt asked.

"Oh, no, he don't reprimand easy," said Vaughan, who grinned as laughter swept the room.

General Vaughan did not finish his testimony yesterday, and will be on the stand again when the Senate investigations subcommittee meets at 10 o'clock this morning.

Senator McCarthy asked him to try, in the meantime, to prepare a list of persons who had made campaign contributions to him after he had intervened for them with Government agencies.

"I have been sitting here now for days," the Wisconsin Republican said, "wondering why Mr. Vaughan had gone to such great lengths in interceding in behalf of these various clients of Mr. Maragon's and getting special consideration for various clients.

"I frankly have the impression that Mr. Vaughan did not personally profit financially."

Thinks Maragon in Clear

General Vaughan made it very clear earlier that he didn't believe the Senate subcommittee had proved its case against Maragon, who now is threatened with court action on charges of perjury and income-tax evasion.

Senator McCarthy asked him when he first found out that Maragon "had been picked up in New York for smuggling."

The White House aide said it was "some time" after the incident and that Maragon had told him it was a "mistake" and was "all washed up."

McCarthy asked if he bothered to check up on Maragon's background before he recommended him for a State Department assignment to accompany an American elections mission to Greece.

"No," said Vaughn. "I thought I knew Mr. Maragon's background. I mean, I didn't—well, I didn't know whether Mr. Maragon had a background; it never occurred to me; he was a Senate Office Building character."

"Do you think now you made a mistake in recommending Mr. Maragon?" McCarthy asked, with the so-called smuggling incident and the State Department job in mind.

"Well," said Vaughn, "if all of the things that have come out about Mr. Maragon prove to be true, why, I think I made an error in judgment; yes, sir."

"Tell me this," McCarthy asked, "Do you think now that you made a very serious mistake in recommending to the State Department they hire Maragon, or are you still in doubt, Mr. Vaughn?"

General Vaughan said, no, that 30 or 40 Greek-Americans were going over to act as assistants and interpreters.

McCarthy interrupted to ask

"Probably not over $2000 . . ."

"He may have—yes, yes, yes . . ."

satisfaction, General, that you should not have recommended Maragon for this job?" he persisted.

"No, sir; it has not," General Vaughan said.

"As of today you think you would still recommend him?"

"Unless I knew something to the contrary."

"In other words, unless you knew more than we now have before us in regard to Mr. Maragon, you would still recommend him for the position; is that correct?"

"I think so; yes."

"That is very interesting," observed McCarthy.

Flanked by Two Colonels

When General Vaughan took over the witness chair, he was flanked by Col. C. J. Mara, assistant White House military aide, and Col. Carl Ristine (U.S.A., retired), a Washington lawyer. General Vaughan told reporters that Ristine was a former comrade-in-arms.

Entertained at Hunt Home

When the questioning began, Chairman Hoey asked General Vaughan about his relations with James V. Hunt. The White House aide said they were "just ordinary friendly relations," and remarked that he had attended two parties at the Hunt home.

Then came a question about one of the most extraordinary revelations of the investigation—the story of how Gen. Alden Waitt, suspended chief of the Army Chemical Corps, used Hunt's office to draft a memorandum for General Vaughan.

In this, Waitt made remarks about his fellow officers that were far less complimentary than what he had written about them in the official fitness reports. He was accused at the hearings of trying to "cut the throats" of officers who were potential rivals for his job.

Admits Asking Waitt for Data

General Vaughn admitted that he asked Waitt to provide him with "factual data" about officers who might appear on a promotion list. He said he had done things like that before, and that Mr. Truman approved of it.

He said he did not know that Waitt wrote the memorandum in Hunt's office, and could see no reason for it.

Asked about Maragon, he said he met him when he himself was secretary to the then Senator Truman and Maragon was the "energetic" representative of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad.

He said that at no time was Maragon authorized to represent him or the White House "in any way, shape or form."

"It did come to my attention a year or so ago," he said, "that Maragon was flashing a picture of himself and the President, and I taxed him with this and he denied it very vehemently . . ."

Fee Never Entered Mind

Senator O'Conor (D., Md.) asked the witness whether he sought a fee or benefit from anything he did in connection with matters under consideration by the committee.

"No, sir, I did not," said Vaughan. "It never occurred to me. My duties at the White House in that continuation of my duties—practically the same—(as) in Senator Truman's office."

O'Conor asked him if some of his tasks were outside the scope of his job as military aide.

"They certainly were outside," General Vaughan said, "but they were not outside of the scope of my job as also an administrative assistant. It is necessary that everybody at the White House do that. There is such a volume of material of that kind to take care of that if one person coasts it just makes it harder for everyone else."

Senator Robertson (D., Va.) asked him about his earlier explanation about the seven deep freezers that were given to him by David A. Bennett, head of the Verley Co., a dealer in perfume oils. He asked him specifically about his statement that the freezers "did not have commercial value."

"Well," said Vaughan, "you see . . . I wrote the statement after the publicity had come out, and some friends of mine who I had originally intended to do a good turn for were being embarrassed, and I did not want my friends to be embarrassed because of any act of mine; and I got that statement together hastily and Charlie Ross put it out. . . . You recall, Senator, that was four years ago, and recollections may be hazy.

He said he noted that the first freezers that were shipped out were different shapes and sizes.

"The term "reject" might have been a very ill-advised expression," he said, but added that he believed it to be justified at the time."

Senator O'Conor asked him about a notation that appeared on his letter to Mrs. Ruth Shipley, chief of the Passport Bureau, a notation to the effect that he had said that President Truman was "personally interested" in Maragon's trip to northern Italy.

Says President Didn't Know

"Did he (the President) know anything about it?" O'Conor asked.

"Oh, no," said Vaughan, "he never knew anything about it. He never heard of it . . ."

The White House aide praised Mrs. Shipley as "one of the finest public servants we have in Washington." He conceded that Mrs. Shipley may have got the impression he said Mr. Truman was interested in Maragon, but he was certain he never said it.

O'Conor, alluding again to the question of benefits or remuneration of any kind, asked General Vaughan if he was willing to have the committee examine his accounts.

"Yes, sir," said Vaughan. "My financial records are available to the committee or auditor at any time."

Senator McCarthy took over and began asking about the Tanforan race track in California, specifically about earlier testimony that Vaughan had visited Housing Expediter Tighe Woods and urged "speed" in the matter of a construction permit.

"I urged speed in a decision," General Vaughan said, explaining later that he wanted the decision to be "in accordance with the regulations."

He said, in response to another question, that he may have talked to James V. Hunt about the Tanforan case, but explained he didn't know Hunt had anything to do with it at all.

McCarthy asked if he knew, when he interceded in the race track case, that the owners had experienced much difficulty with the California courts.

"They told me, yes, that the former owners had gotten in trouble," said Vaughan, "but that this was entirely a new company, and that was the basis of their plea—that they should not be penalized for the misdeeds of their predecessors."

He said he took Bill Helis' word for this, and arranged an appointment for Helis and others to see Expediter Woods.

Quizzed on Hathorn Story

Senator Mundt began questioning General Vaughan about the story of Herbert C. Hathorn, former minor official of the Department of Agriculture, who said the White House aide called him in behalf of a molasses company represented by Maragon and implied that he could "get" his job.

General Vaughan could recall nothing about the incident.

Mundt asked if he remembered telling Hathorn, "Well, we Democrats have to stick together."

Vaughan admitted that he had made such a statement on numerous occasions.

Mundt kept after Vaughan. At one point, the White House aide said with some vigor:

"All I take exception to is that I threatened the man and tried to get him to do something that was against his instructions, and threatened him with the loss of his job. I have never talked to a buck private under my command that way."

Mundt asked him about what he said in his prepared statement, that Hathorn's story was a "fantasy."

General Vaughn insisted that it was insofar as it concerned him.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R., Me.) remained quiet up until the very end of yesterday's session. Then she signalled that she had something to say.

Senator Smith Has Question

"Mr. Chairman," she said, "I have only one question today. I may have some more tomorrow.

"General Vaughan, do you have or have you ever had a safe deposit box here or anywhere in this country or abroad with Mr. Maragon?"

"Oh, I never have," said General Vaughan. "I have never had any financial dealings with Mr. Maragon except those that have been brought out."

Correction

Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) said in a Sunday night television interview that he was not "shooting in the dark" when he questioned John Maragon on whether he had ever worked for gambler Frankie Costello. A story in The Washington Post yesterday omitted the word "not" through typographical error, making Senator McCarthy appear to say the opposite of what he actually said. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Text of Vaughan's Statement at Hearing names of specific companies or individuals whose requests for assistance came to me and were given my attention.

Now let me refer to specific matters which have been mentioned before this committee.

This committee has been considering the business activities of James V. Hunt. I have known Mr. Hunt for about five years, having met him when he was with the Quartermaster General, and I was assigned to the Truman Committee. Our relationship has been friendly. To the best of my recollection, he has never asked and I have never aided him in any matter with a Government agency.

THE freezers which have been discussed here were a gift from two old friends of mine. This gift was an expression of friendship, and nothing more. There is absolutely no connection between this gift and any assistance I have given these friends. At no time have I taken action as a member of the White House staff in exchange for a gift or other favor.

The assistance which I gave to the Verley Co. of Chicago was precisely what I would have done for other concerns in comparable circumstances had I been requested to do so. The Verley Co. desired to send representatives to Europe to prepare for the resumption of business after the war. Such action by American businessmen was urged by the State Department, and has been part of this Government's official policy in the postwar years—not only without substantial criticism, so far as I know, but with warm support in Congress and elsewhere. I am sure this committee would know more about that than I do, but that is my understanding.

I have been advised that the following are the facts in connection with the European trips of representatives of the Verley Co.

The Verley Company complied with such requirements as the State Department laid down for expediting the business visits of American business men to Europe. Two of the fundamental requirements were that the companies seeking transportation must have maintained prewar business relations with Europe, and that the business to be helped in Europe would aid the rehabilitation of Europe.

THE Verley Company fitted those requirements; its business dealings with Europe had been known by the Department of State as far back as 1926, and the reestablishment of the production of essential oil in Europe would provide employment for a large number of people. The exportation of this product would improve Europe's dollar position.

The priorities for the transportation the Verley Company received from our Government in the postwar period corresponded with similar facilities made available to many American business corporations during the same period of time—among them some of the best known corporations in America.

With respect to John Maragon, I have known him since 1941 when he was employed by a railroad company to assist in obtaining transportation for members of Congress. I have had no business connections with Mr. Maragon. I have never authorized him to represent or speak for me, or the White House, in any matter pertaining to my duties. Upon his request, I have given him assistance in matters when it appeared to be entirely proper to do so.

AS for the Tanforan matter, these are the facts as I recall them. William Helis, whom I have known for many years, asked me to make an appointment for Eugene Mori, an associate of his, with the office of the Housing Expediter.

I made that appointment, and sometime later, Mr. Helis asked me to make an appointment with Tighe Woods, the acting Housing Expediter, for Mr. Mori. I made this appointment also. When Mr. Mori arrived in Washington, I went to Mr. Woods' office to introduce him to Mr. Woods, and left shortly thereafter. At no time did I attempt to influence the decision of these Government officials.

I come next to the testimony before this committee concerning my alleged intervention with the Department of Agriculture in a matter involving Allied Molasses Co., of which one Harold M. Ross, of Perth Amboy, N. J., is said to be president.

I have no recollection of ever having heard of any company by that name. Nor do I have any recollection of knowing or ever meeting a person by the name of Harold M. Ross.

It is, nevertheless, entirely possible that I might have made a telephone call to the Department of Agriculture making an appointment or addressing a routine inquiry in a matter affecting the company. As I made clear earlier, I have made hundreds of such routine calls on behalf of persons whom I did not know. To remember the occasion or the names of more than a small fraction of those for whom I performed these services would be humanly impossible.

I WILL, therefore, assume, even though I have no recollection of the incident, that I spoke by telephone to some representative or representatives of the Department of Agriculture at the instance of a company named Allied Molasses Co. Beyond that, however, I cannot go. Most emphatically, I cannot concede that I made the statements attributed to me by Mr. Herbert C. Hathorn, who, incidentally, is unknown to me.

It just doesn't make sense that I would suggest to Mr. Hathorn or to any Government employe that I would "get his job" if he refused to grant a request which he sincerely regarded as improper, or that I would be instrumental in rewarding him for betraying his public trust. I, therefore, must and do deny that I urged Mr. Hathorn to adopt any particular course of action in the matter of Allied Molasses Co., or that I made any threats to him.

I can only say that the Hathorn tale is an out-and-out fantasy insofar as it relates to me. Whether there was a misunderstanding by Mr. Hathorn, or whether someone impersonated me in a telephone conversation with Mr. Hathorn, I do not know.

There is nothing to conceal in my record as a public servant. I will answer any questions you may wish to ask. I have discharged my duties honestly and to the best of my ability.

Georgetown Merchant Held In Shooting of Del-Negro

Samuel Ochs, 42, a Georgetown clothing merchant, was arrested here yesterday on a Maryland warrant charging him with the shooting of an indicted gambler last Friday morning in Bladensburg.

The man who was shot, Bernard (Yorkie) Del-Negro, 37, of 2428 Tunlaw rd. nw., is recovering from bullet wounds in both legs at Prince Georges General Hospital.

Only 24 hours earlier, Prince Georges County police had arrested George Paul Harding, 38, a former convict of 437 Massachusetts ave. nw. and charged him with Del-Negro's shooting.

County Detective Earl J. Huber said the warrant for Ochs' arrest was obtained on the basis of "new information." He declined to elaborate, but did add that for the time being the charge against Harding would remain.

Shot From Bushes

According to one informant, the "new information" involved the story of a witness to an argument at the bar of the Crossroads Restaurant in Bladensburg.

Del-Negro was shot about 3:30 a. m. outside the restaurant. Del-Negro told county police the shots came from bushes and he did not see his assailant.

In an argument which preceded the shooting, Ochs was knifed and later doctors at Sibley Hospital took several stitches above his right eye.

Ochs lives at the Hamilton Hotel. With a brother-in-law, Jack M. Small, he operates the Samjacks clothing store at 3145 and 3147 M st. nw. He was arrested there by Detective Sergt. James Tolson of the fugitive squad on a warrant brought into the District by Huber and Polict Chief Henry J. Nebel of Bladensburg.

Won't Waive Extradition

Ochs refused to waive extradition rights and was released in $1500 bond for a hearing today in Municipal Court. At police headquarters, Ochs again insisted he knew nothing about the shooting.

His attorney, Mark J. Friedlander, said it was "coincidence" that Ochs got into a fight at the Crossroads Restaurant at about the same time Del-Negro was shot.

Ochs let go a merry "ha, ha" when asked by a reporter if the incident at the Crossroads was connected in any way with the two-alarm fire that swept through a portion of his store on August 10.

The fire marshal's office said the store's annex at 3147 M st. was gutted by the fire, which apparently was started by an electric iron, left on, which burned its way through an ironing board and toppled to the floor.

Reported $2000 Missing

However, after the fire, Ochs reported to Seventh Precinct police that $2000 in cash was missing from cash boxes and registers.

When two detectives from the general assignment squad went to the store to question Ochs about the missing cash, he advised them, "Oh, you'd better forget about the investigation." Police are still investigating.

The fire marshal's office said a local insurance firm had agreed to settle the $2000 loss for $1200.

Harding, arrested Monday in the shooting case, is free in $1100 bond pending a hearing September 19 in Hyattsville police court. He has a police record dating back to 1927. He was once convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to 3 to 6 years.

Famous N. Y. Detective Resigns From Force

New York, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Johnny Broderick, the famous Broadway detective who sold his life story to the movies for $75,000 was forced to resign from the Police Department under pressure, it was reported today.

His opponent for a Tammany political post, Gerald Murphy, charged that Broderick was asked to resign by District Attorney Frank S. Hogan because of his association with gangsters and racketeers. Hogan confirmed today that Broderick had been asked to resign.

Broderick said his resignation was voluntary.

'Snow White' Suit Red Hot

New York, Aug. 30 (AP).—You can walk into roaring fire with flames licking your entire body, and live there comfortably for more than two minutes in a new snow-white suit out of the Aero Medical Laboratory.

This suit, the first and only one yet made, was shown to the Aero Medical Association today by the laboratorys doctors from Wright Field, Ohio.

The purpose is rescue work in the blazing gasoline of wrecked airplanes.

The suit withstands 2000 degrees Fahrenheit for up to three minutes. Then you come out to cool down, but only the suit needs cooling.

It has 18 layers, which pile up to a thickness of about half an inch.

The first two outer layers are fiberglass and the whiteness reflects away some of the heat. The third layer down is silver foil, which also deflects the heat.

Then follow layers of glass cloth, in zones of three to four each, interspersed with aluminum foil.

Layer Number 17 is coal black fiber glass coated with neoprene. Black absorbs heat.

Senate Agrees On Arms Aid

Committee in an effort to secure "overwhelming" bipartisan support in the Senate for the arms bill, which was cut in half by the House.

Besides Connally, members were Senators Vandenberg, Chairman Millard Tydings (D., Md.) of the Armed Services Committee and Chan Gurney (R., S. D.), its ranking minority member.

After the meeting of the subcommittee yesterday afternoon Connally said:

"I think we've gotten a sort of working paper for the committees which, if approved, will smooth out all main differences."

The compromise, Connally said, does not touch on the controversial subject of arms for non-Communist China. Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) has demanded that China aid be included in the program.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, however, has told Congress that the Administration does not feel justified in asking more arms for China. He suggested, instead, a fund be made available for use in non-Communist sections of the Far East at the President's discretion.

The Administration had proposed an over-all program of $1,450,000,000, with $1,160,900,000 going to the Atlantic Treaty nations. Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.) has suggested a cut of 360 million dollars. Besides the Atlantic Treaty nations the bill carries aid for Greece, Korea, the Philippines and other non-Communist nations.

At a meeting of the full committee before the subcommittee was appointed Connally proposed that the Vandenberg-Dulles cut to one billion be accepted provided the Administration be left free to spend money to stimulate arms production in European countries.

In the past, Vandenberg and Dulles have suggested that the tentative 155 million dollar outlay to stimulate arms production in Europe is one of the places where savings could be made.

Would Put Off Decision

They argued that the decision of "whether or where to develop a permanently expanded munitions industry on the continent could better be left to a collective judgment by the Defense Council and Defense Committee to be set up under the Atlantic Pact.

In view of the announced compromise agreement, Vandenberg and Dulles are expected to join with Administration supporters in opposing deeper cuts in the arms aid to Europe.

"I am hopeful that the adjustments suggested will produce a measure that Congress can approve, that the country can approve, and that meets with our obligations under the Atlantic Pact," Connally said.

Red War on Tito Hinted by Germans

'Serious Threat'

Iran Speeds Troops to Red Border

Tehran, Iran, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Long columns of mechanized infantry have moved toward Iran's 1500-mile northern frontier to meet a "most serious threat" from the Soviet army, a military official said today.

This official said the Iranian government feared the border situation is "even more serious" than it appears.

New United States-built Army trucks, part of the 10-million-dolla arms credit, were being loaded wit troops and sent to the north as fast as they rolled into Tehran from the ports, informed sources said.

A military observer just returned from the northern frontier, which stretches from Turkey to the Caspian Sea south of the Soviet Caucasus, said trenches and fortifi a-tions are going up "feverishly" on the Iranian side.

Foreign Minister Ali Asghar Hikmat announced Sunday that the Red army has seized 15 Iranian soldiers and one farmer and were holding them as hostages against the return of three Russian refugees.

Berlin, Aug. 30 (AP).—The West Berlin newspaper Sozialdemokrat said today a vanguard of 3500 heavily armed East German police had been sent to the Yugoslav border for "a possible war against Tito."

The newspaper said perhaps 12,000 more will be sent for "anti-Tito action" in the Balkans, and "with feverish hurry tanks, guns and other military equipment are being loaded on trains and trucks to go with the German police troops."

British and American Army intelligence officers said they knew of the report, but could not confirm it. Sozialdemokrat, British-licensed newspaper of the Social Democratic Party, claims to have a network of underground agents in the Soviet zone.

The newspaper's report followed by a day the disclosure by the United States Military Government that five East German policemen fled into the American zone at Hof, saying they escaped to avoid military service with Communist guerillas in Greece. The escaped policeman said the Russians had issued an order for all unmarried members of the East German police under 25 years of age to be recruited for the service.

In recent days reports have circulated of Soviet mechanized divisions moving up to the Yugoslav border through Hungary. Yugoslav officials at Belgrade have referred to these reports as "only rumors."

Red Troops Near Yugoslavia

ernment "works only on instructions of its Western masters," whom it did not identify.]

Meanwhile, a very important move in the diplomatic field has been made by the Belgrade regime, it was learned.

Nilovan Djilas, government propaganda chief and one of the four Yugoslav Communist leaders singled out for condemnation by the Cominform 14 months ago when Yugoslavia was expelled from Cominform membership, has been selected as one of two leading members of the Yugoslav delegation to the United Nations General Assembly opening in New York on September 21. The other will be Foreign Minister Edward Kardelj. Both are members of the nine-man Yugoslav Politburo.

The appointment of Djilas lent weight to reports that the Belgrade regime will either bring its own complaint of a Soviet menace to Yugoslavia before the U. N. or that one of the major Western powers will present it in agreement with Belgrade.

U. S., Britain May Ease Ban on Arms to Tito

London, Aug. 30 (AP).—The United States and Britain may ease restrictions soon on the sale of arms to Yugoslavia, diplomatic officials said today.

A decision is expected when Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin discuss the matter in Washington in the next week or two.

U. S. Statement on Value of Pound Desired To Stop 'Financial Chaos' in West Europe

London, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Rumors that the British may cut the value of their money is leading the states of western Europe toward financial chaos, British officials warned tonight.

Businessmen are said to be afraid to buy for fear that the value of the British pound, worth about four United States dollars, will change suddenly.

British negotiators in Washington will ask for some sort of an authoritative American statement on the subject to help restore stability, informed sources said.

"Persistent rumors on devaluation are fast bringing trade to a standstill," one highly placed official said.

Meanwhile, it was announced that M. E. Dening, chief of the Foreign Office's Far Eastern section, will fly to Washington next week to join strategy talks paraleling the financial negotiations.

The Foreign Office said Dening would arrive in Washington September 6 to assist in talks between Secretary of State Dean Acheson and Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin.

Bevin and Acheson will review the situation in China and other eastern areas in talks definitely linked with Britain's financial crisis, Foreign Office sources said.

Kem Asks Truman If We Have Same Marxist Goal

Senator James P. Kem (R., Mo.) demanded yesterday that President Truman explain his statement that the United States and Britain seek the "same economic ends."

He said Britain is "committed to the principles of Karl Marx" and challenged Mr. Truman to state clearly whether he has "committed himself to work toward the same economic end as Socialist Britain."

Kem attacked in a Senate speech Mr. Truman's address Monday before the American Legion convention in Philadelphia in which the President said there would be no "trick solution" to Britain's economic plight in the talks opening here September 7.

Reds to Stand Alone in Finn Parliament

Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 30 (AP).—There were indications tonight that the Communists would stand alone in an expected fight against Finland's government when Parliament opens Thursday.

Fear of a double-edged attack on the Social Democratic regime of Premier Karl A. Fagerholm lessened when the Agrarian (farmers') Party announced it had made no plans to raise a question in Parliament "at this time."

Agrarians had been expected to start a debate over farm prices. Farmers have been complaining of a government decision to cut the price of milk.

The Communists are expected to raise a question of confidence in the government on the grounds that police took brutal action against Communist-led lumber strikers at Kemi recently.

Meanwhile, there was no apparent weakening of labor's efforts on Finland's strike front.

Hitler 'Brutal War' Order Is Trial Evidence

Hamburg, Germany, Aug. 30 (AP).—An alleged secret Hitler order for waging brutal war on Poland was introduced in evidence today at the British war crimes trial of Erich von Mannstein, former German field marshal.

The document reportedly contains notes of Hitler's speech to his generals in Obersalzburg, nine days before the invasion of Poland.

Hitler was alleged to have told his war leaders—among them Von Mannstein—of the ruthless way the war was to be fought in Poland.

The document was accompanied by an affidavit from Louis P. Lochner, former Associated Press correspondent in Berlin. H said he recognized the document as handed him in Berlin in August 1939 by Hermann Maas, who later was executed for his part in the 1944 bomb plot against Hitler.

Maas told Lochner he got the document from Gen. Ludwig Beck.

Guerillas Fight Fanatically on Greek Front

With the Greek Army on the Grammos Front, Aug. 30 (AP).—Mauled Communist guerillas fought fanatically today to defend a small horseshoe-shaped pocket on the Albanian border.

The horseshoe's open end was in Greece and was about two miles across. The pocket was about three miles deep, with one end based on precipitous Mount Kamenec and the other on saw-toothed Steno Ridge.

Pounded by artillery, Greek-manned U. S. Navy helldivers and Spitfires, the guerillas hung on desperately to keep open routes of retreat for their comrades trying to escape the Greek army's mopup of the Grammos Mountain bastion.

Many guerillas already have escaped into Albania.

A general staff spokesman said the rebel political and military chieftains, including Communist Secretary General Nicholas Zachariades and Commander Spyridon Goussias, had gone into Albania after the first day of the Greek army attack. The spokesman said this information had been received from a captured guerilla officer.

3 Police Given Permanent Officer Rank

Two policemen and a policewoman were promoted from temporary to permanent rank by the District Commissioners yesterday as a result of a vacancy created by the retirement of Lieut. Cyrus E. Perry, night inspector.

Lieutenant Perry was ordered retired for physical disability on Thursday with retirement pay of $193 a month.

Temporary Lieut. Joseph T. Kerby was promoted to permanent lieutenant to fill Perry's post at $4634 a year. Temporary Sergt. Frances M. C. Bird, of the Women's Bureau, was named permanent sergeant at $4228 a year and Temporary Corpl. John J. Kinney was made a permanent corporal at $4025 a year.

The Commissioners turned down a recommendation by Acting Police Superintendent Clarence Talley for the reappointment of Vyrl R. Couperthwaite, who resigned from the force earlier this year and now seeks reappointment.

The Commissioners appointed John T. Rudkin, 23, as a private, class I, at $3077 a year and relieved Pvt. William L. Wisebacker from motorcycle duty on the recommendation of the Board of Police and Fire Surgeons.

which they had heard vividly described. The sergeant wanted to go back home, and was permitted to do so.

Barsov and Pirigov came here, for political asylum, and as guests of the Chamber of Commerce of Virginia had a week's sightseeing trip through the State.

Subsequently, the State Department said, Barsov "spent most of his time with former Russian nationals settled in the vicinity of New York." Pirigov went into seclusion to write a book.

The Russian Embassy, in a press release yesterday afternoon takes the story from there.

"On July 28, a Soviet citizen, Borzov Anatoly Porfirievich, came to the consular division . . . (and) stated . . . he had deserted.

'Repented of Offense'

"Borzov stated further that he repented of the offense and was appealing to the embassy to take him under its protection and return him to his native country.

"While awaiting his departure, Borzov stayed in the Alturas Hotel, 1509 16th st. nw. On August 17, about 4 p. m., Borzov came to the embassy, and after 5:30 p. m. left. Before leaving he said that on the same evening or next day, he would come to complete preparation for his forthcoming departure.

"Borzov did not come to the embassy, neither on the evening of August 17 nor in the following days."

At the Alturas, clerks said Barsov disappeared without a trace, leaving an overcoat, toilet kit, and other belongings.

On August 23, the Russian Embassy asked the State Department to find out what happened to him. No reply was forthcoming, the Russian Embassy said.

"Recently it came to the attention of Government authorities," said the State Department last night, that Barsov, who has a wife and child in the Soviet Union, wanted to return. As a result, the Department of Justice returned him to custody in accordance with usual procedures."

The stay at Ellis Island, the State Department said, was for "security reasons," until August 22.

The State Department said when its statement was made public that "the Soviet embassy is being notified."

At the embassy, telephone calls brought only the reply that there was "No business tonight. Call tomorrow morning, 9 or 10 o'clock."

Steel Dispute Mediation Try Halted

New York, Aug. 30 (U.P.)—President Truman's fact-finding board today withdrew its offer to mediate the steel dispute.

Board Chairman Carroll R. Daugherty said the three-man panel withdrew its offer because the 58 steel companies insisted that any mediation be conducted on an individual company basis rather than on an industry-wide level.

He said the board would go ahead with writing its recommendations to the White House for a "fair and equitable" settlement of the dispute, aimed at staving off a nationwide steel strike set for September 14. The report must be submitted to Mr. Truman by September 10.

Daugherty said the board decided to take back its offer after a five-man committee representing the companies met with the board less than an hour this morning. The offer to mediate the dispute between the companies and the million-member United Steelworkers of America, CIO, was made last Friday.

He said the board hopes to finish its report to the President before September 10 but "we have such a tremendous amount of work to do we may run the full time."

The board must base its report on the case for and against the steelworkers' demands for a 30-cent hourly fourth round package increase. The union is seeking 12.50 cents an hour for pay envelopes, 11.23 cents for pensions and 6.27 cents for social insurance.

Child-Placing Agency Pay Considered

District Commissioners yesterday began consideration of whether to authorize licensed child-placing agencies to accept reimbursement from adopters for expenses incurred by the organizations in adoption cases.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West ruled that the city heads have the power to permit such action, but that it was a policy matter as to whether to do so.

The step was proposed by the committee on regulations of the Board of Public Welfare in its annual review of regulations covering the agencies.

Fred S. Kogod, committee chairman, recommended that such payments, if authorized, be limited to $600 per child. This figure was based on an estimate of $200 for maternity care, $24 for medical service for the child, $216 for three months' maintenance of the child and $134 for investigation of applicants with the remainder for general expenses.

tended when it exempted employes of retail and service establishments.

A proposal by Senator Pepper to exempt newspaper boys from provisions of the act also was approved by the Senate.

Taft, the Republican policy leader, had earlier thrown his support behind the bill which he said he favcrs "as a whole."

Senators Humphrey (D., Minn.) and Kefauver (D., Tenn.) introduced amendments to make the present minimum wage law apply to the District of Columbia as a local act. Both said they doubted that more than a handful of Washington workers would get a wage boost from such a move, if approved, but they thought the act should apply here as a "floor" under local wages.

One expert in Humphrey's office estimated the law would cover about 20,000 District workers, practically all of whom now get at least 75 cents an hour. Humphrey said possibly some unorganized day laborers, drug store employes or gas station workers might get a raise but he had no exact figures. He pointed out the District has a minimum wage law for women under which they must be paid at least 75 cents an hour.

Taft said that while the proposed increase would step up the minimum wage in inter-State commerce industries by 87½ per cent, this was not out of line with increases in pay for most industries and businesses. He said the wages of the 14 million workers in manufacturing had gone up from an average of 63 cents an hour in 1939 to $1.38 this June. In the same 10-year period, he said, the rates in the bituminous coal industry rose from 88.6 cents to $1.95, and in building construction from 93 cents to $1.93.

Taft said that unless minimum wages are lifted, considerable inequality will exist between unorganized wage earners and those in unions.

McNayr Backed on Job Hunt

Montgomery County Manager Irving G. McNayr had a "perfect right" to consider taking the vacant city manager post at Las Vegas, Nev., County Council President Frederic P. Lee said yesteray.

Speaking "strictly for myself" at yesterday's council meeting, Lee said he believed every county employe, from elevator operator up, has the right to inquire about another job.

Lee's statement was regarded as an indirect indorsement of McNayr, who has been under heavy political fire recently.

The five other council members present concurred in Lee's defense of McNayr, who has been criticized both for his job inquiry and his brush with Police Chief Charles M. Orme.

McNayr had asked the council to fire Orme when the chief questioned McNayr's order for use of one-man-operated police scout cars. Orme apologized publicly and was returned to duty. Lee yesterday said "the idea that a man should not look for another job is involuntary servitude of peonage."

After news of his Las Vegas job inquiry came out 10 days ago, McNayr announced he had not and would not seek the $10,800 post. He makes $10,000 in his Montgomery County job.

In other actions yesterday, the council:

Chinese Reds Draw Near Key Railroad

Canton, Aug. 30 (AP).—Chinese Communist troops today slashed to within 30 miles of the Canton-Hankow railway, lifeline for the main Nationalist defense forces for all south China.

The Reds overran Jucheng, 170 miles north of Canton and 40 miles east of the ralway. They then sped on 10 miles west and attacked Liten, press reports said.

Should the Communists reach the railway, supplies no longer will be able to move from Canton by rail to the armies of Gen. Pai Chunghsi. His headquarters are at Hengyang, 265 miles north of Canton.

Pai's 200,000-man armies then would have little choice but to retire southwestward into Kwangsi Province, west of Canton.

The news from the far northwest was also bad for the Nationalists. A commercial pilot was forced to turn back from Sining, capital of Tsinghai Province. He said he was told the field there was unsafe.

Sining is 110 miles west of Lanchow, capital of adjacent Kansu Province. Lanchow was captured by the Reds last week.

AF Expects Jet Record At Cleveland

Cleveland, Aug. 30 (AP).—Air Force officials expect to push the world's closed course speed record above 600 miles an hour on Labor Day, when four jet fighters compete in the "J" division of the Thompson Throphy Race.

Word received today from Muroc (Calif.) Ari Base is that the F-86 Sabre jets have exceeded 600 MPH on individual laps around a seven-leg 15-mile course which duplicate the official race course.

The present closed course record for jets is 515 MPH, set in 1947 by F-80 Shooting Stars.

Two Sabres from the First Fighter Group at March Air Base, Calif., and two from the Fourth Fighter Group at Langley Air Base, Va., will compete. The Fourth formerly was located at Andrews Air Base, Md.

The pilots are Capt. Vernon J. Henderson, Fresno, Calif.; Lieut. Burt L. Cashin, Palo, Calif.; Capt. Martin C. Johansen, Phoenix, Ariz., and Capt Bruce Cunningham, Hammond, Ind.

D. C. Awards Razing Jobs For Play Areas

Contracts for razing four abandoned school buildings and adjoining dwellings to make way for four playgrounds were approved yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The city heads decided to use public school building repair and maintenance funds to finance the projects. Three other playground sites scheduled for demolition work were tabled until funds for the projects became available.

The Ace Wrecking Co., 4002 Minnesota ave. ne., will tear down structures at the Syphax School playground, Half st. between N and O sts. sw. for $1355; a group of 31 buildings at the Logan School playground, 3rd and G sts. ne., for $3955 and the Tyler Elementary School and dwellings at 11th st. near G st. ne. for $3955.

The ABCD Wrecking Corp. of 1331 Jefferson Davis hwy., Arlington, will remove the Wallach Elementary School at D st. between 7th and 8th sts. se. for $3750.

The three projects temporarily shelved are the Logan Elementary School building on which a bid of $2955 was entered; the Smallwood Elementary School, I st. between 3d and 4th sts. sw. for which $2950 was asked, and the Brightwood Elementary School, Georgia av. and Peabody st. nw., for which $2955 was requested.

Interior Dept. Official Named 1st Civilian Governor of Guam

Carlton Skinner, director of information at the Interior Department, has been nominated by the Navy as the first civilian Governor of the Island of Guam.

President Truman is expected shortly to make the formal appointment, effective September 1.

Under an executive order, the island, scene of epic battles in World War II, is being turned over by the Navy to the Interior Department. The island is now under Rear Admiral Charles A. Pownall, naval Governor.

This transfer takes place June 30, 1950. But the Navy and Interior have agreed to turn the top job there over to Skinner as soon as Admiral Pownall retires. Skinner will be responsible to the Navy until next June 30 and after that to Interior.

Interior's Division of Territories has asked Congress for $115,000 for "technical support" of the transfer of authority next spring and for an additional $600,000 to replace the 212 Navy and Marine personnel there with 198 civilians. The House tossed out the request but the Senate Appropriations Committee has yet to act.

A meeting is scheduled today on the deficiency bill carrying the money but it is unlikely the Guam item will be reached for some days, it was reported yesterday.

Truman Fought Wraps

President Truman campaigned against these "restrictions" on his trade powers, and asked Congress to junk the peril points. The House already has voted to do so, and the Senate Finance Committee agreed, 7 to 6.

In view of this, leaders are skeptical that Mr. Truman would agree to postpone the fight until an election year.

In presenting the proposed compromise to the President, Lucas said he was doing so by request, and was reserving any personal position in the matter.

It was learned that the compromise was first broached by Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

George said last night that even if the President agrees, it may be difficult to work out an agreement with Republicans and high tariff Democrats. Some of these have been plugging for more binding tariff restrictions, including a flat 5 per cent limit on foreign oil imports.

Opening of the high level Anglo-American financial talks in Washington last week was regarded as one factor in the compromise talk. The tariff debate, with GOP Senators pulling no punches, would get under way in the Senate just as high British officials arrived here for the talks. Some Democratic Senators believe postponement of the volatile trade debate would at least minimize tension between the two countries.

Three More Bridges Eyed

tion. But, he said, the congestion will return in a few years.

Lieut. Col. L. E. Cox, acting District Engineer Commissioner, revealed the new highway bridge at 14th st. nw. will be completed next January or February. The old span, which carries at least 62,000 vehicles every 24 hours, will continue in operation, Colonel Cox disclosed, while another new bridge is built 'either immediately upstream or downstream."

Plans formerly contemplated tearing down the old span and erecting the new one on its site, he said. Funds are not available now to begin the bridge. Construction will take two years.

Traffic feeding onto the Whitehurst freeway will be staggered. Wallace L. Braun, deputy director of the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic, announced traffic lights will be set east and west of Washington Circle nw. in a manner to "develop a progressive movement" of traffic. The signals will "stagger access to the circle from its various entrances to avoid congestion."

Traffic Light at 26th and K

A traffic light is to be put in at 26th and K sts. nw. to handle truck traffic, Braun said. At 27th st. nw. and West Virginia ave., an officer will be stationed during rush hours.

The traffic planners were told by Capt. Mark Raspberry, head of Park Police, that the only ultimate solution of traffic snarls at the bridges is construction of a span across the Potomac from Constitution ave. Root added such a bridge must be considered.

A better place for the bridge, said Clifton G. Stoneburner, Arlington County highway engineer, would be from New Hampshire ave. nw., to Arlington. This, he declared, would give motorists access to new facilities, rather than taxing present ones. It would connect directly with Shirley hgwy. and Lee blvd. in Arlington, he asserted. A bridge from Constitution ave., he said, would be difficult to link with those roads.

Would Alter Key Bridge

Stoneburner proposed converting Key Bridge into a six-lane span. This could be done, he said, by removing the sidewalks. A cantilever sidewalk area could be built outside the bridge's abutments, according to Stoneburner.

A blast at the Public Roads Administration was leveled by Arlington County Manager A. T. Lundberg.

"Lack of planning," he charged, has made it impossible to turn right off Key Bridge onto the George Washington Memorial pkwy.

Arlington Highway Engineer Stoneburner declared that the parkway "is of absolutely no value so far as outbound traffic is concerned." No right turn onto the parkway is planned, he added.

to any group by not naming it; that he wants to hear from "any organization interested in civic betterment."

The Senator made it clear his policy as unofficial "mayor" of Washington is: "Things are never well enough to be let alone."

Neely said he has no specific program for Washington but he said he favors local suffrage, daylight saving, and civil rights. He said he would oppose any move to raise the sales tax rate or cut down on exemptions though he has no plans to introduce repeal legislation.

Neely strongly opposed the new sales tax law when it was up for debate in Congress this year.

The new "mayor" said:

"I intend to avoid provoking any controversy and having the people at each other's throats.

"I feel I have quite a stake in the District, that all the taxpayers have quite a stake. This is the financial and political Capital of the world. Washington's beauty, cleanliness, law and order and the care of its wards should set a standard for all other States and for all the world."

The Senator indicates three fields in which he is likely to seek improvements in Washington — public works, the crime rate and public welfare.

He said there are some streets which are "eyesores" due to bad paving, that something must be done about the slums and that more recreation facilities are needed.

Neely said he was "appalled" to read in the newspapers a report that Washington led the Nation in certain types of crime. (The FBI's uniform crime report for the last six months of last year rated Washington worst in the Nation for aggravated assaults.)

On welfare matters, Neely said he hopes to see a study made of the needs.

Neely began his political career in 1908 as mayor of his home town, Fairmont, W. Va. He pointed out yesterday that its population was around 12,000 to 14,000, while today there are approximately 15,000 West Virginia voters living in Washington.

He first came to the House in 1913. Neely has been elected four times to the Senate and is the only West Virginian ever to have been Senator, Governor and House member. He was elected to his present term last November.

Neely's election as chairman followed the resignation of Senator J. Howard McGrath to become Attorney General.

AF General To Head New Defense Unit

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary Louis Johnson's drive to unify the armed forces more closely moved into another field yesterday—communications.

He announced the creation of an Office of Communications-Electronics under the Department of Defense and named Air Force Maj. Gen. Harold M. McClelland to head it. The new agency will serve under the direction and control of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

His Duties Defined

The announcement said McClelland will:

1. "Establish and control general policies, standards and programs" for joint activities in the field.
2. Exercise "general supervision over administration and utilization of such personnel and facilities."
3. Plan for the better coordination and integration of wire, radio and telephone facilities of the Army, Navy and Air Force.
4. Coordinate with security forces all matters dealing with communications security.

In carrying out these duties, McClelland will have the advice of the joint communications-electronics committee, it was said. He will become chairman of this existing group, which consists of the communications chiefs of the three services.

His post will be rotated among officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force, normally every two years. There will be two assistants, one Navy captain and an Army colonel.

General McClelland now is deputy commander for services of the Military Air Transport Service at Andrews Air Force Base, Md. A 55-year-old native of Iowa, he headed the airways and air communications service of the Air Transport Command during the war.

vate and in public continually derided, belittled, and in all other manner expressed contempt, dislike, and abhorrence of the plaintiff and his work throughout the later period of their life together."

Grosvenor alleged that his wife's treatment of him forced him to receive medical care in two different hospitals between February and April, 1948. He said physicians have advised him that return to former living conditions would permanently impair his mental and physical health.

The complaint recounted that he made five trips abroad with his wife between 1924 and 1947, hoping to improve conditions between them, but these failed to do so. He said that during the trips his wife harassed him and derided his assignments for the National Geographic Society.

Couple Has Three Children

The Grosvenors have three children, Mrs. Robert C. Watson, jr., 23; Alexander Graham Bell Grosvenor, 21, and Gilbert Melville Grosvenor, 18.

The settlement agreement made substantial conveyances to Mrs. Grosvenor, though the complaint said she has an income of $7000 to $9000 a year since her mother's death in 1947.

He pledged to pay her $400 a month between August and December, 1948, and $500 a month after that until his death or her remarriage. In event of his death, she will receive proceeds of a $40,000 life insurance policy, unless she remarries.

In that case, the money will be divided in equal shares for the three children. She receives custody of the younger son, and he agrees to pay for the boy's support and college education. Certain personal property at the Woodland dr., home and at one on Gibson Island shall go to him, but she shall have title to the Woodland dr., place and assume a mortgage on it, under terms of the settlement.

The Big Wind

In the first shock of disaster, estimates of damage tend to be overestimates, and this may or may not prove true of what the hurricane did in Florida. The citrus crop suffered heavily, to be sure, but one authority has already pointed out that higher prices brought by shortage may make up the difference to growers. The "damage," in this event, will be to the pocketbooks of the consumers who can afford to buy and to the diets of those who cannot.

As to property destruction, again it is well to await calmer appraisal after the debris has been cleared away. But, with all the qualifications possible, the big wind did enormous damage. The tail that flicked Washington Sunday night in passing was a puny breeze in comparison to what hit the coast around Palm Beach. A high gust of 52 miles an hour here is enough suggestion of the fury and havoc entailed when the hurricane attained a velocity of 162 miles an hour at Jupiter, Fla.

A similar hurricane in 1928 cost some 1800 lives in Florida. This one took only two. By such a measure the two storms seem not to be in the same class, though the truth is otherwise. The wind blew harder this time, but the people on the ground knew better what to expect and their houses were better built to weather it than the boom-time shanties of two decades ago.

With a few trees and wires down hereabouts, we can, by a sort of multiplication process, sense the destruction in Florida and appreciate the vigor with which the Floridians have set about repairing it. Like the legendary phoenix, the wind-struck State seems always to rise again out of the debris, with new resolution to become a still lovelier fairyland of flowers and fruits.

Men For The Jobs

We hope the reports that President Truman is considering the nomination of Mon C. Wallgren for a recess appointment as chairman of the National Security Resources Board are unfounded. It is the legal right of the Chief Executive to nominate anyone he chooses for this important post. But the Senate already has judged Mr. Wallgren's qualifications and found them wanting. Even though Mr. Wallgren might be able to serve a few months through the maneuver of an interim appointment, such an evasion would court another Senate veto, besides being contemptuous of Congress.

The NSRB has been drifting leaderless for eight months now. It is scarcely conceivable that during this time the President could not have located a chairman with better qualifications than his crony, Mr. Wallgren, possesses. Nevertheless, the President does have a problem in inducing men of suitable background to serve as Government policy-makers. The difficulty is well illustrated in the case of Carl Ilgenfritz, vice president of the United States Steel Corp. Mr. Truman and the Defense Department have selected him as chairman of the Munitions Board at $14,000 a year. A considerable stew is brewing in the Senate over Mr. Ilgenfritz's wish to be allowed to draw his $70,000 salary from U. S. Steel and participate in the company pension plan.

This is the same dilemma that confronted the country with dollar-a-year men, many of whom continued to draw private salaries during the war. The dilemma was never satisfactorily solved. For while it is easy to raise the issue of impropriety and to cite the possibilities for favoritism, it is not so easy to suggest an alternative.

There is no indispensable man, of course, but for certain types of jobs the best candidates are largely confined to industry. Yet when industrial executives are importuned to take Government positions paying far less money than they are getting in private life, either they must drastically reduce their standard of living or they must receive outside income. As a result of high taxes many of the younger and more vigorous executives of late years have not been able to amass any substantial investments and are dependent on their business salaries.

It is all very well to talk of the prestige of Government service, but for various reasons the plain fact is that public service does not command the respect that it should. And even prestige is not enough to offset great financial sacrifice. Thus, if a complete divorce from business connections were established as a prerequisite for top Government jobs, the President's hands would be tied. His selection would be limited largely to men of independent wealth—and even such men usually are interested in the status of their investments.

Perhaps the criterion ought to be the directness of the connection retained with private business. It probably would be unwise for a man to continue as an active executive of a company while holding a Government policy-making job—though several of Mr. Ilgenfritz's predecessors did just that. On the other hand, we see no compelling reason why an executive on leave of absence in a Government job should not continue to draw his private salary. Most men of character would lean over backward to avoid favoritism in such instances, and competitors in industry could be relied upon to keep an eagle eye on them. In the last analysis, the problem is one of individual morality, and the pace must be set by the President and his associates. If a man is corruptible, technicalities about his salary will not make much difference.

Cronyism

In his appearance before Senate subcommittee yesterday, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan seemed a man secure in his own sense of innocence and unconscious of having done anything wrong. From the evidence so far available, he appears to have been guilty neither of any crime nor of any personal venality. Yet by his own admission he has done things so grossly improper on the part of a White House aide as to call into question his own sense of propriety and to make him a serious embarrassment to the President whose friendship he has claimed, and no doubt deserved if devotion be taken as the test of friendship, for the past 30 years.

General Vaughan seems to have been a "fixer" by instinct for the sheer love of "fixing." He "fixed" travel arrangements and introductions to high Government officials for a variety of businessmen. He did this sort of thing, he testified, simply "for the purpose of assisting people in transacting business with the appropriate agencies of their Government . . . At no time have I tried to cause a Government official to take any action which he did not consider proper and in the best interests of the Government." This seems either incredibly ingenuous or gravely disingenuous. An introduction or a request for special consideration from the White House is not without weight. And if General Vaughan does not understand that intercession on his part is inescapably a form of influence, he ought not to be in a position where such influence can be so irresponsibly exerted.

In all probability Senator McCarthy was correct in expressing the opinion that General Vaughan derived no personal profit from the favors he did for friends and acquaintances. To what extent the Democratic Party may have profited from these favors is a matter which the Senate subcommittee will quite justifiably explore today. But the distressing point about General Vaughan is that he seems unable to recognize any impropriety short of outright venality. It is not, as he appears to suppose, an adequate defense of his conduct that he did nothing for private gain. He did things for friendship or out of good fellowship or perhaps on account of political considerations which, while perhaps common enough on the part of a secretary to a Senator, are insufferable on the part of a military aide to the President.

General Vaughan's assertion that the President knew nothing of these misuses of his position can be accepted without question. But the President must know now that friendship, or cronyism, has led him into conferring the title of military aide on a man lacking the capacities and, in particular, the sensibilities which the post demands. However devoted to the President General Vaughan has been, however decent his intentions, his indiscretions have now made him an excessively costly liability. The Government of the United States cannot afford to institutionalize cronyism.

Greece's Foes

Little confirmation was needed that Albania, Bulgaria, and, to lesser extent, Romania, have continued to aid the Communist rebels in Greece. The United Nations Special Commission on the Balkans, in its latest report, merely makes the charge official. In so doing it also makes liars of the Albanian and Bulgarian governments, which had stated that they had observed their international obligations with respect to internment of the rebels.

In perhaps the most damning accusations so far, the UNSCOB report asserts that Albania and Bulgaria have continued to allow the Communist forces free access to their territory for tactical purposes, have provided "large quantities of war material," have maintained a chain of hospitals, and have assisted in recruiting guerillas. Romania also has participated in the hospital chain and is now harboring the so-called "Free Greece" radio station of the Communists. Moreover, none of the 25,000 Greek children removed during 1948 has been returned. Some have been shunted as far away as Czechoslovakia and Poland. Most heartless of all, some of the boys and girls also have been drafted into the guerilla forces.

Despite this ganging-up, the Greek army continues to mop up remaining Communist-held areas. With the capture of Mount Grammos, the heavy fighting may be approaching a finale. It is apparent that some sort of de facto settlement of the war must be forthcoming shortly. The stage is set for a settlement, because the Communists are above all realists, and they must respect the strength the Greek army has shown with American arms.

Already such a settlement exists for all practical purposes with Yugoslavia, whose aid, as the UNSCOB report notes, has diminished or ceased altogether. The time is ripe to bring pressure on Tito to formalize the settlement. A similar possibility holds for Albania, which is having internal difficulties of its own, and must be uneasy over reports of Albanian dissidents forming in Yugoslavia. Indeed, if a Moscow broadcast is any indication, the Albanian government already has started to disarm Greek rebels on its territory. Undoubtedly the process of settlement could be speeded up if the United States were to restore its representative in Albania. Negotiations with Bulgaria might be more difficult, but once a wedge were driven in the satellite support of the rebels, Bulgaria might be forced into acceptance.

Such a de facto settlement with Greece's neighbors would not automatically end the threat to her integrity, and in all probability it would be necessary for Greece to continue to garrison her borders in strength. But the piecemeal disintegration of the rebels offers a chance which Greece—and the United States—ought to be prepared to exploit concurrently with the elimination of internal conditions making for communism in Greece.

Truman's Contribution

Judging from the British reaction, President Truman's Philadelphia speech insures a friendly atmosphere for the talks which will begin next week with the British and Canadians. The pre-parley recrimination which has been flung back and forth across the sea has been parallel with the squabbling behind the iron curtain. However, there is an important difference. It is that whereas Stalin and Tito are making war on each other with everything short of artillery, the trouble-making within the free world has been entirely nonofficial, except, perhaps, for the participation of one of the members of Britain's Labor government, the egregious Mr. Emanuel Shinwell, who has been pretty vocal and outrageous in his criticisms of America. The preliminary talks between the officials have been thoroughly friendly; otherwise a conference would have been out of the question.

Mr. Truman assured the British that the United States has no intention of trying to interfere in the internal affairs of Britain. There were two reasons for such an assurance. One was that nothing would please some extremists in Britain's Labor government more than an election issue over American "dictation." This would be a foolproof electioneering dodge, insuring another term of power for the Labor government at a time when it is losing some of its support in the country. The other reason for the presidential assurance is the criticism of the Socialist experiment in Britain that has been evoked recently in America. However, this criticism is not anything like as general as some of the British newspapers make out. Evidently some of their correspondents in this country spend most of their time and their newspapers' good money in combing out any stray American comment of an adverse nature.

At the same time the effect of the Socialist experiment in Britain upon the ability of Britain to earn dollars is of some concern to America. The American taxpayer is financing the Marshall Plan as a means of helping the British to readjust themselves to their new world situation. If there is no sign of such a readjustment, naturally the taxpayer is going to wonder whether his investment is justifiable, for, as the President said, "We are not engaged in a charitable enterprise." Socialism—and the threat of more to come—may or may not have something to do with the depletion of Britain's dollar resources. In our opinion it has something (though by no means everything) to do with it, and it is certainly an impediment to unity with Europe, as the Strasbourg debates have demonstrated. It has been well said that only the rich can afford socialism, and Britain, as a result in great part of the impoverishment of two world wars, is no longer rich. She can no longer, for instance, draw upon dividends from vanished investments abroad for the support of high living standards. Britain's adjustment to her new situation is a problem that in the final analysis Britain must solve for herself, but she has now been assured, if the assurance were necessary, of "a spirit of friendliness and helpfulness" on the part of the American team.

Thin Blue Line

Of the 16 surviving members of the Grand Army of the Republic, only six traveled to Indianapolis for the eighty-third encampment. All are 100 years old or more, the youngest being the commander in chief. He wants to be the last of the GAR's chief officers, and supports the decision taken a year ago that the current encampment would be the organization's last.

But some of his elders aren't going along with the decision. The sole business at the only business meeting is the question whether to rescind the 1948 death sentence. A leader in this movement is the senior vice commander, 102 years old, who doesn't want to be denied his chance of succession. He is supported by the oldest survivor, who counts 108 summers, and a couple of others who likewise haven't had a crack at the commandership.

This, at any rate, is the ostensible reason for the revolt. At the century mark any man ought to be old enough to make his own decisions, whatever the consequences. So we hope the forces of revolt outvote those of the status quo. Let age have its fling. No one has better earned the right.

His seven hungry brothers charge and wheel

Fotitch's Yugoslavia

Permit me to write a few observations in connection with the article "Tito Is No Friend Despite His Troubles," published in your issue of August 25, by Mr. Constantin Fotitch, former Ambassador of Yugoslavia.

Mr. Fotitch is very bold and courageous when he says publicly:

"We are fighting for the restoration of political and personal liberties so that our people may decid freely for themselves the social and political reforms which they want in their country" and when he pretends to be a standard-bearer in the struggle "against a regime which has suppresed every expression of free opinion, every critic of its action, which is trying to impose spiritual regimentation and maintains itself in power by the ruthless method . . ."

Yugoslavia has existed for 30 years. There has never existed in that country, created after the First World War, a regime of "political and personal liberties" where the people could "decide freely for themselves social and political reforms," so one could not restore in Yugoslavia a regime of "political and personal liberties" as it has never existed before. One could restore the tyranny and royal dictatorship of the years between the two World Wars.

As to Mr. Fotitch, he belongs to that Serbian clique which ruled Yugoslavia between the two World Wars without any regard for "political and personal liberties" and which maintained itself in power by ruthless force. Those regimes and particularly the royal dictatorship, of which Mr. Fotitch was one of the stanchest diplomatic representatives abroad, paved the way for the postwar Communist dictatorship and tyranny.

Fotitchs are no alternative to the present barbaric regime in the European countries behind the iron curtain if one wants a lasting peace and settled political and social conditions in that very sensitive part of Europe.

Race and Home Rule

John W. Simpson's anything-but - democracy-in-democracy's Capital argument in your August 27 issue proves nothing except that there is more myopia than eye doctors ever dream about.

He assumes that Negroes (one third of the District's citizens) tend to vote as a unit, a proposition easily refuted by the facts of politi al life. Mr. Simpson asserts that one third of the voters could control an elective government.

As a practical fact this may be true; but his arithmetic is poor when he implies that one third is larger than a majority if all those eligible vote, and he neglects the fact that the most conspicuous example of "government by minority" is those States in which literally millions of both whites and Negroes are virtually disenfranchised or otherwise weakened politically by the poll tax and/or unfair proportioning of election districts.

Proponents of home rule should take heart when hearing such arguments as Mr. Simpson's, for in the racial bigotry and harangues for a selfish status quo that come from home rule opponents they may indirectly measure the great strength and validity of their own proposals.

LEON SCHKOLNICK.
Washington.

Doubtless it required great courage on the part of Mr. Simpson to express the reason why so many "red-blooded Americans" fear the advent of home rule for the District of Columbia.

The fourteenth amendment of the Constitution declares that "All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside." In amendment No. 15 "The right of the citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude." Closely connected with the right of citizenship and the right to vote is the right to hold public office. I take it that the above mentioned clause of the Constitution together with the equal privileges or immunities clause of the fourteenth amendment, means that no citizen shall be denied the right to hold public office because of race, creed or color.

There is no reason to believe that the District's Negro population is a "militant minority" ready to rise up with home rule to take over the city. Nor is there any reason to believe that the individual Negro will not, like every other citizen, vote for the man he thinks best suited for office.

Ted Williams

I have been reading your paper for three years now, and feel that yours is one of the finest in the country. Your editorial comment has, with a few deviations, been superb. Your fine selection of columnists ably covers the field of intelligent reporting.

However, where does Povich get off running down Ted Williams every time he wants to fill a column? To be sure he glosses this by "damning with faint praise." Last year Williams missed 15 games. According to Povich if this had been DiMaggio the Yankees would have collapsed. This year for the first third of the season, without DiMaggio, and with practically the same team, the Yankees led by five or six games. DiMaggio is back in and they're leading by two.

"Williams isn't a 'real' good hitter because he can't hit to left field." (He's been one-two for the American League batting crown ever since he broke in, and has hit two left field home runs this year). Povich admits that Williams has a long right field in Boston but doesn't mention that the stands along the third base line in Yankee Stadium are only 296 feet away. In the field it's absurd to compare Williams with DiMaggio (comment from The Washington Post, Williams is the best left fielder in the American League.)

It's true that some of these remarks are taken out of context, but to the casual reader the overall effect of Mr. Povich's columns would leave the impression that Williams is lucky to be playing in the same league with DiMaggio. If I had a statistics book available, I'm sure more refutations would be possible.

I've been a DiMaggio fan ever since I saw him play back in 1939. However his stature as a great ball player (and he is that) is not increased one whit by making disparaging remarks about Williams.

Metcalfe's Poems

In his obsession for "good" poetry, Mr. Paul Oehser (letter published August 27) has unwarrantedly and with a disdainful degree of causticism attacked the worth of James Metcalfe's poetic endeavors. I am not a James Metcalfe enthusiast. But I don't allow his works to render to me the same havoc of nausea that they supposedly do to Mr. Oehser. For whereas I do not esteem Metcalfe poetry as milestones in poetic literature, and I trust that Mr. Metcalfe does not either, I frequently find them to be little gems of living, conceived and executed in a reasonably poetic language of charm and personality.

Mr. Oehser is surely looking for poetry in a most [illegible]ely place—the newspaper. One just doesn't look for or expect to find poetic masterpieces in daily newspapers, and should not be appalled, certainly not to the point of nausea, simply because what he finds there is homely compared to the beauty of Moore, selfish to the universality of Shakespeare, cowardly to the heroicism of Virgil, dull to the fire of Dante or childish to the maturity of Goethe.

I don't know what type of poetry or prose Paul H. Oehser appreciates, but years of reading the Portraits of James J. Metcalfe convinces me the latter has a God-given sense of pithily expressing in excellent grammar the feelings of his readers in the pursuit of their every-day mundane existence. S. J. R.

Arms Aid Dole

Most Fair Deal schemes apparently have an ulterior aim inimical to the people's interests. A striking example is the so-called "foreign arms aid" which seems to be designed primarily to ineffectively scatter United States funds and arms over Europe while providing more jobs for Federal bureaucrats.

Some of the highest officers of the armed forces, according to recent broadcasts over MBS by Walter Trohan, say that they do not approve this arms program and declare it was formulated by the State Department—not by the Defense Department. Surely the State Department's China record does not qualify it for making military plans. Moreover, these high officers warn not only that the United States arms sent to Europe might fall into Communist hands (as in China) but also if truly effective military assistance were to be given Europe it would have to be much more extensive and expensive than this State Department scheme.

What then is the real purpose behind this "arms to Europe" plan? Apparently it is a revival of the old lend-lease scheme for continuing handouts to foreign countries. Those of us who were in wartime Government service know that much of the lend-lease personnel transferred to the Foreign Economic Administration and then to the State Department. With these expert spenders wielding power in the State Department it is easy to see why Secretary Acheson is urging the adoption of the "military assistance program."

Also it is easy to see that this spending scheme will help to crush American citizens with higher taxes while affording no additional security. Congress should kill this bill!

Remembering The War Dead

By Malvina Lindsay

Memorial Trend

WE ARE having another spurt of remembrance of those who gave their lives in the last war. Community memorials are being unveiled or dedicated throughout the country and the world, and a Senate subcommittee is considering what should be done about a national memorial in Washington.

Hence there is again discussion of the much argued question: How can the living best pay tribute to those who died in their defense?

The feeling for what is called the "living memorial" has run high since the last war, having been given much impetus by war veterans. Hence memorials in many communities have taken the form of parks, forests, recreation areas, swimming pools, civic auditoriums, stadiums, community centers.

Though there are fewer big stone monuments rising than after the last war, the monument forces, who hold that "shrines of beauty" can best honor the war dead, are still strong. They insist that in the Capital particularly a "permanent" memorial that will inspire generations to come is needed. They cite the appeal of the Lincoln Memorial both to the transient visitor and to those who go to it regularly for spiritual refreshment.

YET proponents of the "living memorial" ask how many of the monuments in Washington and throughout the country elevate and inspire those who look at them. How many, they inquire, are just hunks of stone? Nevertheless, the stone memorial seems about the only national tribute that could ever be agreed upon for a national capital. And there is always the chance it will be warmed by some creative fire.

But now, after four years of nominal peace, with memorials beginning to take shape in city, town and village, the puzzle is: Why have there not been developed more truly imaginative memorials that would take the torch from the hand of the fallen warrior? Why have not more communities had the vision and courage to build their memorials in a medium more permanent even than stone, that of ideas?

It is true that something boldly different is being developed in the Pacific War Memorial, a chain of scientific centers to be located on the Pacific Islands captured by this country. On these heretofore unexplored islands scientists will gather information that it is hoped will help medicine and chemistry and augment the world's food supply.

Some small memorial projects have adventured into the field of ideas. But no great projects have been started or proposed to further the cause of human freedom for which American youths were sacrificed. No city has taken its memorial funds to encourage international good will, help eliminate race and class antagonism, provide studies or scholarships devoted to the building of world peace, aid research into human aggression, educate the potential national leaders so urgently needed, further the working and general understanding of the American system of government.

BUT—the answer always comes—that sort of thing is too general, visionary, controversial, dangerous. People can't understand it. Safer to stick to stadiums, parks or statuary.

Yet people will never understand such things if some start isn't made. At any rate it would not be visionary or controversial to found a library—from which ideas might flow down the years—or to make libraries more available to people who need them.

For libraries lead all other projects announced by the 2454 American communities in the community improvement contest sponsored by the General Federation of Women's Clubs with the aid of the Kroger Co. Certainly this shows a demand for them.

No one voice can speak for the war dead. But, it is easy to imagine some one of the sensitive faced youths whose likeness we saw among the "killed in action" groups, as saying:

"I would want every dollar, dime or nickel given in tribute to my sacrifice put into something that would help as quickly as possible to civilize the world so that young men like myself wouldn't have to fight every 20 years. I would want it to be some project that would move as directly as possible toward making men free and peaceful. But no matter how slow, how temporary, how 'non-self-sustaining' (as fine arts commissions say of such things), I would want it to be something to stir men's minds, free them from immaturity, ignorance, sickness. For however much or little came out of such a memorial it would have more than permanence; it would have multiplication."

Aid To Education

To settle the dispute over transportation of pupils to sectarian schools with public funds we must get down to constitutional American principles. No such money can be spent to transport anyone to religious instruction. Then, no religious services of any kind can be held at opening exercises in our public schools. That is fair to Catholics, Protestants, Jews, agnostics and atheists.

In voting, legislators should be Americans and adhere to legal principles. They should not be influenced by the size of the vote of any sectarian bloc in their home district.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

Missouri Past, Washington Present

THE CLIMAX of the 5-percenter investigation raises a simple question. How has the Truman Administration got into this mess? The answer seems to be that the Missouri past of President Harry S. Truman is reaching out to give his Administration its odor of courthouse politics and creeping mediocrity.

The way his past affects Truman's present is suggested by the fact that, in the 30s, the three Missouri artillery reserve regiments were commanded, respectively, by Col. Harry Vaughan, Col. John Snyder, and Col. Harry Truman. The roles now being played in the Administration by former Colonels Vaughan and Snyder suggest the extent to which Truman holds to his rule that any man who has been politically loyal and a personal friend is capable of holding any post in the Government.

This rule led to two public setbacks when Truman tried unsuccessfully to appoint his old crony Mon C. Wallgren and his political angel Edwin Pauley to important posts. But it is not generally realized the extent to which the Administration has been affected by those men, especially the Missourians, who "knew Harry when." For the process of government by crony does not end with the appointment of any particular crony.

One old Truman friend, for example, is former Postmaster General Robert Hannegan, the Missouri politician who made Truman's nomination for the Vice Presidency possible in 1944. Hannegan has long since left the Government, but his influence lives after him in the recent appointment to the Supreme Court of former Attorney General Tom Clark. Clark was a lobbyist in the Texas Legislature for a number of big oil companies before he became a Hannegan protege. His sponsorship by Hannegan, and the fact that the President likes him, are his only visible qualifications for the Supreme Court bench.

ANOTHER CRONY from Truman's days of political apprenticeship is William Boyle, the new chairman of the Democratic Party, who has known Truman since boyhood, and who was a lieutenant in the Missouri artillery reserve when Vaughan, Snyder and Truman were colonels. Like Hannegan and Truman himself, Doyle was schooled in Missouri's rough-ready politics.

He therefore believes in a tough, partisan approach, and his influence at the White House has resulted in a growing partisanship in appointments like that of Navy Secretary Francis Matthews. Matthews is no doubt able enough. But his only stated qualifications for the crucial defense job have been the fact that he is a good Democrat and the further fact that he is a good Irish Catholic. More serious than this sort of thing is that partisanship in appointments has tended to break down the bipartisan approach to foreign policy and national security.

The egregious Vaughan himself has been loudly interested in appointments. He is known to believe that he had a great deal to do with the selection of Louis Johnson to succeed James Forrestal as Defense Secretary. It is true that Vaughan was Forrestal's loudest White House enemy and Johnson's chief White House booster, but in fact he probably had far less influence than he imagined.

ON the other hand, Vaughan's fellow former colonel, John Snyder, has certainly had a great deal to do with building a strong conservative and obstructionist axis at the heart of a supposedly progressive Administration. Snyder was responsible for the appointment of Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer, who is if anything rather more cautiously conservative than Snyder himself, and Snyder and Sawyer have joined hands with Truman's aide and old friend, John Steelman, to make up a powerful internal conservative bloc.

This suggests one of the most curious aspects of this whole Administration. There is no doubt at all that Truman sincerely detests the kind of shady finagling which has emerged from the 5-percenter investigation. A long time ago he issued angry orders forbidding John Maragon from ever again darkening the White House doors. Yet he knew that his old crony, Vaughan, was also Maragon's crony, and he kept Vaughan in the White House.

In the same way, there is no doubt at all that Truman is perfectly sincere about the Fair Deal program. Yet he allows his crony, Snyder, who quite openly dislikes virtually everything the Fair Deal stands for, to build an anti-Fair Deal axis at the center of power. It is not surprising that the Fair Deal has got nowhere.

This Administration has some major accomplishments to its credit, and it has some very able men, including Missourians, working for it. But it is now in clear danger of getting stalled at dead center, and this danger arises in large part from the President's evident conviction that anyone he knew in the old days, especially in Missouri, is capable of running the American Government.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Behind The Arms Aid Program

So many words already have been spilled in argument over the arms aid program and so many more will flow in the course of the Senate debate that the major objective is likely to be lost sight of. It is the business of the forest and the trees.

Childs

This is an effort to put the program in the perspective of those who have drafted it and worked for its acceptance. It is based on talks with both civilians and military men responsible for inception of arms aid for Europe and for carrying out the program if and when it is finally approved by Congress.

The primary goal insofar as the Atlantic Pact nations are concerned is to rearm the nine divisions that France has in being. Most of the $1,160,000,000 for the Atlantic nations would go for that purpose.

Those divisions are today inadequately armed with obsolete weapons. They are being trained under new and rigorous methods that represent a radical departure from French military tradition. Foreign military observers have been impressed with this training.

But no matter how thorough the training, these troops could not fight in a modern war without modern weapons. This is considered basic since the French divisions would be the core of the initial holding operation should the Russians decide on war. As military men point out, there is little reason to debate their will to fight so long as they do not have the equipment to fight with.

TO STRENGTHEN the French divisions would greatly increase the confidence of the British. Fearing another Dunkirk, Britain has been reluctant to make a commitment to send any substantial forces to the Continent. The British commitment is at present a small one.

What few seem to realize, judging from many of the statements that are made, is the continuing fantastic unbalance between the military strength of eastern Europe and western Europe. The Soviet Union today has an estimated 170 divisions under arms. While they are not at full strength, this is approximately four million men.

This huge force with its modern armaments is distributed around the perimeter of Russia with by far the greatest concentration in the west. Russia's satellites have an estimated 50 divisions. These vary greatly in their potentiality ranging down to the untrustworthy and the worthless.

But it doesn't take a military genius to see that use to which these divisions could be put in connection with Stalin's effort to overthrow the Tito regime in Yugoslavia. If Russia became involved with the West, or feared imminent involvement, the satellite divisions could at least be employed to contain Tito's military forces. Such a plan for containment is believed to have been the subject of the well-advertised meeting of Cominform political and military bosses in Bulgaria last week.

IN ADDITION to arms aid spent to equip the French divisions, a smaller amount would go to start French armament production. The idea is to enable France to manufacture ammunition and spare parts for equipment furnished from the United States. Eventually, the French would be self-sustaining.

A small part of the fund would go for warning equipment in northern Europe and for other more or less token beginnings of defensive armaments. But the creation of a bulwark in western Europe is the essential target. Firmly and resolutely, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the newly named chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has tried to keep this goal in view.

There were those in high position doubtful of the wisdom of pushing the arming of Europe so soon after the Atlantic Pact. The fear was that this might lead the Russians to conclude that they had no choice except immediate war if they were to prevent the use of American resources in filling the defense void in the west.

But once the decision had been taken and announced, then the doubters put aside any lingering uncertainty. They believe that the United States must now go through with the program that has been proclaimed. To do less than that would, it is felt, provide another unhappy example of the kind of too little and too late vacillation that preceded the war which began just 10 years ago. To both East and West it would be a proclamation of indecision.

Yet the House has cut the amount for western Europe in half and gone on a vacation. After the Senate Armed Services and the Foreign Relations Committees reach some decision, the Senate will debate the question lengthily. What finally comes out, at this stage, is anyone's guess.

Federal Criminal Law Asked To Punish Runaway Fathers

By The Associated Press

A Federal crackdown on "runaway fathers" was proposed yesterday by Representative Steed (D., Okla.).

Steed said many fathers are abandoning their children for the sole purpose of getting them on Federal-State relief. In many cases he added, the social security program actually is financing the break-up of homes.

Moreover, he told reporters, his own investigation has revealed "an ever-increasing number of cases of actual conspiracy between the father and mother to get their children on relief rolls."

But in the usual case, Steed said, the father tells his family he "is going away to hunt for work," and later "more often than not he is discovered in some far-off State living with another woman."

Therefore, the Oklahoman said, he is appealing to the House Judiciary Committee for an early hearing on legislation to make it a Federal criminal offense for a parent to desert a child and cross a State line.

There now are 1,350,000 dependent children receiving an average of about $28 each monthly under the social security public assistance program.

Hawaii Loses Fight to Bar Picketing in Dock Strike

Honolulu, August. 30 (AP).—The Territory of Hawaii today lost its fight against a Federal Court decision upholding union picketing in the 122-day dock strike

Furthermore, the court ordered hearings opened Wednesday on a union request for an injunction against Hawaii's dock seizure law. The hearing will proceed unless the Attorney General can convince the court more time is needed to prepare his case.

Counsel for the striking CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union announced it will put Union President Harry Bridges on the stand as its first witness.

The court yesterday ruled picketing could continue and the territory could operate the docks until a decision is reached on the ILWU suit challenging the constitutionality of the dock seizure law.

Counsel for the Territory and the union clashed when they met today to argue the wording of the court's picketing order before Federal Judges J. Frank McLaughlin and Delbert E. Metzger.

The court finally accepted the union draft of the order with one exception. The union draft provided for no bond. The court ordered ILWU to post a $500 bond.

Under the order, the ILWU is allowed to picket docks where picketing is exercised as a right of free speech protesting the dock seizure law, and not as a part of the labor dispute.

Sabath Says Truman Wants FEPC to Pass

Chairman Adoplh J. Sabath (D., Ill.,) of the House Rules Committee, said yesterday that resident Truman is "very interested" in getting House approval of a fair employment practices bill.

Sabath said after a White House call that Mr. Truman put the FEPC legislation—one of the most controversial items in his civil rights program—high on a list of "must" bills for floor action at this session.

Other bills on the priority list, according to Sabath, include expansion of Social Security, creation of a nationa lscience foundation, statehood for Alaska and Hawaii, and funds for advance planning of a "shelf" of public works in case of a severe depression.

The Rules Committee chairman, who has a key role in deciding what legislation gets to the floor and when, said he promised to "try to see what can be done" about Mr. Truman's list as soon as the House returns from its vacation September 21.

The FEPC bill, outlawing racial discrimination in job opportunities, is strongly opposed by Southern Democrats. While it has a good chance of passage in the House, with its stringent limits on debate, it faces the prospect of a Southern filibuster in the Senate.

State Tax Collections Gain 7.1%

By The Associated Press

The Census Bureau reported yesterday that state tax collections in the last year amounted to $8,300,000,000, a rise of 7.1 per cent over the previous 12 months.

Louisiana led the list in tax increases for the period ended last June 30. Louisiana's State levies jumped 51 per cent. Thirty-nine other States showed increased collections.

Louisiana State levies now are the highest per capita in the Nation, the census report showed. They amount to $92 for every man, woman and child.

Nebraska had the lowest per capita tax revenue—$36. The average for all States is $57, but the trend of State collections still is rising.

Texas had the second largest increase, 31 per cent. At the other extreme were New Jersey, with a drop of 14 per cent, and Connecticut, with a decrease of 11 per ce

The biggest share of the increase was provided by sales taxes, which rose 8.6 per cent to a total of $1,606,000,000 in 1949 and by gasoline taxes which rose 8.8 per cent to a total of $1,260,000,000.

Other States showing a sharp increase in tax collections last year (including unemployment compensation levies) included Marylan1, 14.6 per cent, and Virginia, 16.8.

Miners Work Only 2 Days Next Week

By the United Press

President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers notified his union members yesterday that the three-day work week in the mines will be cut to two days next week because of the Labor Day holiday.

He sent telegrams to all UMW locals advising them that Thursday, September 8, will be an "idle" day. The miners also will be off Monday, Friday and Saturday of next week.

When the last coal wage contract expired on June 30, Lewis put the miners east of the Mississippi on a three-day work week. They report to the pits only on Mondays, Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

On the Fourth of July, which also fell on Monday, the miners took off but reported for work on Thursday to make up the difference.

Meantime, the absence of a new wage agreement was reported to have led major soft coal companies to go "on strike" against the unions welfare and retirement fund. Industry sources said they were withholding payments to the fund under a "no contract, no contributions" policy.

In former years, Lewis and the miners adhered strictly to their old "no contract, no work" policy.

The Taft-Hartley and income tax laws require that a wage contract must be in effect if employer contributions to a pension fund are to be tax deductible.

Farm Prices Fall Off Again

By The Associated Press

Farm prices skidded lower in August, the Agriculture Department reported yesterday.

The general level of prices received by farmers in mid-August was 245 per cent of the 1909-14 average, down 4 points from mid-July. The record high was 307 per cent in January, 1948.

The department said the drop brought the prices closer to parity level than at any time since this country entered World War II. Parity is a figure calculated to give the farmer a fair return in terms of what he has to buy.

Most commodities were lower than a month earlier with most important declines being in fruits, meat animals and cotton. Apples, oranges and peaches were among the fruits that dropped. Lambs, sheep and beef cattle showed the greatest declines among meat animals.

Coton seed, soy beans and eggs were leaders for commodities that went up in price during the month.

Prices paid by farmers for items used in farm production and family living also eased off slightly. The level of prices paid in mid-August was 243 per cent of the 1909-14 base compared with 224 per cent a month earlier and a record of 251 per cent set in August 1948.

Retail prices paid by farmers for clothing, food, furniture and building materials showed some decline. Costs of farm production goods stayed about the same.

The department said prices received by farmers in mid-August were 1 per cent above the parity level. A month ago they were 2 per cent above parity, a year ago, 17 per cent. Farm prices reached a record of 33 per cent above parity in October 1946.

Congress Gets Big California Water Project

By The Associated Press

Secretary of the Interior Krug presented to Congress yesterday a two-billion-dollar program for water resource development of California's Central Valley Basin.

President Truman indorsed a controversial part of the plan, which would make Interior's Reclamation Bureau the major construction agency—and virtually throw the Army Corps of Engineers out of the Central Valley.

Army Engineers Out

Work of the Army Engineers would be limited to single-purpose flood control, or navigation projects.

Truman said more information on engineering and economic feasibility is necessary to justify approval of the whole plan as a comprehensive valley plan.

The President told Krug there would be no objection to sending the project report to Congress "provided it is made clear that, aside from the authorizations for the projects specified, the other projects proposed are to be considered as an inventory of possible future work."

The Army Engineers currently have authority to build nine dams in the Central Valley basin.

Krug recommended, and President Truman concurred, that the authority for three of them be transferred to the Reclamation Bureau, and that the Engineers go ahead and build five dams, turning them over to Reclamation on completion.

Krug proposed that the Ninth Army project be canceled.

Prince Georges Reorganizes Hospital Board

Reorganization of the board of directors of Prince Georges County General Hopsital at Cheverly, Md., was effected yesterday by the Prince Georges County commissioners.

The commissioners last week adopted new by-laws for the hospital providing for appointment of five new members of the hospital board each year and placing the control directly in the hands of the county commissioners.

The members of the board named yesterday are all members of the present board.

They are: J. Robert Sherwood, Mt. Rainier; Waverly W. Webb, Hyattsville; Mrs. Daisy LaCoppidan, Mt. Rainier; W. Carroll Beatty, Hyattsville, and Mrs. William G. Breen, Oxon Hill, all for one-year terms; Mrs. Nora Ballinger, Brentwood; Frank F. Fierstein, Bladensburg; William Bowie, University Park; J. Russell Jones, Laurel; and Dr. Paul S. Herring, Hyattsville, two-year terms; Mrs. Cordelia Brown, Takoma Park; Mrs. Betty Tayman, Cheverly; Walter F. Mulligan, Berwyn; William A. Duvall, College Park, and Theodore Siehler, Laurel, three-year terms.

Harry W. McNamee, president of the board of county commissioners, is an ex-officio member and chairman of the board, which also will include as ex-officio members the president of the county medical society and the president of the Woman's Guild.

A delegation from Hillcrest Heights and Hillcrest Gardens, a special improvement district, appeared to ask for a $38,000 road improvement program. A hearing was set for 11 a. m. September 20 at Upper Marlboro Courthouse.

Board Chairman David S. Hendrick of Washington said yesterday that shipments were $26,000 lower than in the same quarter last year. Lanston has developed two more adding machine models which are now in production, Hendrick said.

Other quarterly figures were as follows: gross profit $483,474 against $561,079 last year; administrative and selling expenses $150,207 against $127,691; provision for Federal and State income taxes $124,254 against $163,209.

Little they get out of Slim but a bit of tobacco from his humidor. Bring your own pipe and matches."

New Formula Set To Split Pullman Income and Costs

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday approved a new formula for splitting up the ea nings and operating expenses of the Pullman Co.

Pullman's sleeping and parlor car business is now owned by 59 major railroads which purchas the business for $75,000,000 three years ago.

The originial formula turned out to be unsatisfactory to some of these lines. They complained that expenses were allocated on a basis of the number of Pullman cars used by a given road. They contended that this was unfair to railroads operating short runs and favored those with longer Pullman passenger hauls.

The ICC acted to remedy this by setting up operating expenses in ten principal categories to provide a more equal distribution among the owners.

The new formula also provides that net profit from Pullman operations on an individual railroad will be shared on a basis of 75 per cent to the railroad and 25 per cent to the Pullman company. The present plan calls for a straight 50-50 division.

The commission also stipulated that where a railroad operates its Pullman service at a loss, the railroad must nevertheless pay the Pullman company an amount necessary to provide a three per cent return on Pullman company's investment in equipment. At present, Pullman receives this three per cent only when it is actually earned.

Mike Rector Samaritan Badly Hurt

A Washington man who was a Good Samaritan for desperately burned, 4-year-old Mike Rector, could use a Good Samaritan himself—except there isn't much that a Good Samaritan can do.

George V. Becraft, beer salesman and motorcycle racer, who yielded 75 square inches of skin for Michael's seared body, will leave the Winchester (Va.) Memorial Hospital today for Washington.

Internes will ride the ambulance with him to see that a smashed rib doesn't puncture his lung.

That isn't all.

Three other ribs are fractured, but not as badly. One of his collarbones has a 2-inch piece knocked completely out of it. One arm probably will be shorter than the other for the rest of his life.

And almost his entire body is scarified by brush burns and scrapes.

Becraft, who is 32, married, and lives at 209 20th st. ne., was riding in a motorcycle race Sunday at Winchester when his mount skidded and he went down sliding crazily. He was taken to Winchester Hospital in critical condition.

He has improved to the point where he can be moved here to George Washington University Hospital, a family member said yesterday.

In the meantime, plucky little Michael, who has defied all the precedents of medical record by living despite third degree burns on 75 per cent of his body, is progressing satisfactorily, according to his physician. He recently underwent three more skin grafts, these from one place to another on his own body.

The doctor said that he "hopes" that Michael will be able to leave Casualty Hospital by November 12, the first anniversary of the day when a blazing cowboy suit so nearly took his life.

Safety Drive Begun On Baltimore Blvd.

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

A major crackdown has been launched by Maryland authorities on traffic law violators on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard to cut the high accident rate, it was disclosed yesterday.

The 40-odd-mile stretch of road, one of the most heavily traveled in the country, claimed a toll of 27 dead and 492 injured in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1949, according to W. H. Bishop, Maryland director of traffic safety.

The coordinated drive against violators included these moves:

1. Trial Magistrate John T. Farrell, at Halethorpe, has increased collateral required of persons charged as violators from 2 to 20 times. Top bail will be $501.45.

Patrols Increased

2. Col. Carey B. Jarman, new superintendent of State police, has assigned additional troopers and greatly increased patrols on the road to spot and arrest violators.

3. Gov. William Preston Lane has initiated a series of meetings of heads of State departments concerned with the problem to devise methods of cutting down the death and injury toll. Next session is to be held Thursday.

4. Other trial magistrates having jurisdiction along the road have agreed to "go along" with the drive by imposing more stringent penalties, though not to the extent of Magistrate Farrell's new collateral schedule.

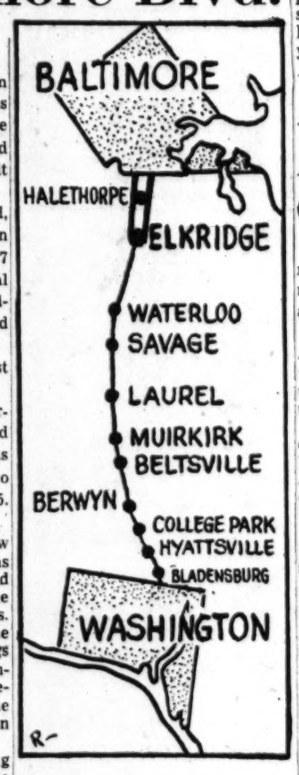
The drive was launched by Governor Lane without fanfare and became public yesterday when Magistrate Farrell announced his new collateral schedule for the 4-mile stretch in Baltimore County, from Elkridge to the Baltimore City limits, where he has jurisdiction.

$101 Bond For 60 M.P.H.

The new collateral schedule is: Speeding, 40-49 miles per hour, $26.45; 50-59 miles per hour, $51.45; 60-69 miles per hour $101.45; 70-79 miles per hour, $201.45; 80 and over, $501.45. Drunken driving, $501.45; reckless driving, minor property damage, $26.45; major property damage, $51.45, and personal injury, $101.45.

Collateral previously ranged from $6.45 to $101.45.

Magistrate Farrell's area of jurisdiction on the highway has a top speed limit of 50 miles per hour, but in the area there are a number of places where lower limits from 25 to 40 miles per hour are posted.



Some of the other boulevard areas, where four traffic lanes are open, have a top speed limit of 55 miles per hour, but there are frequent points such as Laurel with greater restrictions.

State Highway Commission officials said yesterday that traffic counts on the road for a composite average day in 1948 showed a flow of 24,000 vehicles at the District line, 21,000 at the Baltimore city line, and 15,000 at Waterloo, Md.

Shift of Trooper Begun

Although the decision by Colonel Jarman to intensify patrols on the road was not publicized, shift of troopers, and their working hours already has begun and will be continued until the maximum force possible is on duty.

Magistrates cooperating in the drive include J. L. Thompson, Elkridge; J. E. Haslup, Savage; and Arthur Owens, Hyattsville. All said they will study Magistrate Farrell's move but at present they believe his collateral scale is too high.

RFC Puts New Lustron Loan Of $14,500,000 Up to Congress

The RFC has dropped the problem of long-term financial support of Lustron Corp. into the lap of Congress, it was learned yesterday on Capitol Hill.

In effect, the lending agency has asked Congress to give it specific directions on how to act in Luston's application for a new $14,500,000 loan.

FRC already has loaned $37,500,000 to the all-steel prefabricated housing concern, $2,000,000 of which was approved yesterday on an interim basis to keep it in operation.

In identical letters to the Senate and House Banking and Currency Committees, the RFC warned its withdrawal of financial support to Lustron would likely result in liquidation of the Columbus, Ohio concern and the loss of Government funds advanced to it.

The committees were told there was no guarantee Lustron could be placed on a profitable operating basis even if the $14,500,000 application was granted.

Funds were advanced to Lustron under the Veterans Emergency Housing Act and the Housing Act of 1948. Under the latter, the RFC was authorized to use up to 50 million dollars to promote prefabricated housing. If it approved the $14,500,000 application, most of its allotment for prefabricated housing would go to Lustron.

The financial agency has taken the position it is not practicable for it to approve the loan unless Congress directs it to do it by enlarging the 50 million dollars limitation.

Acid Bestows Atom Safety On Animals

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—Scientists reported today they have found a method of protecting animals against deadly atom rays.

Announcing the discovery, the Argonne National Laboratory said "these findings may provide important clews as to the nature of radiation damage and its treatment."

The discovery involves use of cysteine, one of the animo acids. It was found a majority of mice and rats subjected to usually fatal doses of radiation did not die if they first were given cysteine.

Seventy or 80 per cent of the mice and rats treated with cysteine survived irradition which killed about 80 per cent of the untreated animals, the laboratory reported.

Cysteine is an inexpensive amino acid containing sulphur. It is usually prepared from horsehair or wool.

Howard U. Begins Great Adventure

By Richard L. Coe

THIS MORNING some Washingtonians are setting out on a great adventure. Student actors of Howard University, they're sailing from New York this afternoon on the Stavangerfjord for Norway, where at the invitation of the Norwegian government they'll present three plays in a tour which will embrace Norway, Denmark and Sweden.

They'll be living in homes of other students. At the moment there's the likelihood that once the Scandinavian tour is finished, they'll also present their plays to our Air Forces in Europe.

The whys and hows of this visit form a skein of many people's labors.

The venture began last year at a performance by the University Players in their small campus theater of Ibsen's "The Wild Duck." The cultural attache of the Norwegian Embassy saw one of the performances and was impressed that here was one American interpretation of the great Norwegian playwright. It was the fact that Ibsen's drama was the play that started the ball rolling, a fact evidently ignored by those who write letters to editors demanding that the players do dramas written by their own race. The fact that our Negroes know something about Ibsen is what makes their visit so fascinating to the Norwegians.

The Oslo government acted on the suggestion of its embassy here and invited the players over. What was lacking was money to get them there.

Blevins Davis to Rescue

Here Norwegians in America stepped in, contributing a fund to pay travel expenses. But it was a big sum, and at this point the cultural branch of the State Department recognized the value of this spontaneous invitation. Blevins Davis, who had presented an American "Hamlet" at Elsinor this summer, a venture no other American was willing to risk, was informed of the fund. He generously contributed the balance needed.

Howard's president, Dr. Mordecai Johnson, is naturally delighted with this honor that has come to his university. He wisely points out that such an invitation might have gone to any American university from any foreign government, but that evidently no one had ever thought of it before. Now that it's been done, he hopes that other universities will have similar opportunities.

For by living with their contemporaries in foreign lands, Howard's students will have splendid opportunities. As Dr. Johnson puts it, here is a chance for "understanding and persistent workers together for the establishment of a community of friends throughout the world."

Besides "The Wild Duck," "Miss Julie" and "Mamba's Daughters" seems to me the choice is a good also will be performed, and it one. August Strindberg is Sweden's classic playwright and his "Miss Julie" will mean to the Swedes what Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" means to the Norwegians. DuBose and Dorothy Hayward's "Mamba's Daughters," once acted here by Ethel Waters, is a compelling drama of the American Negro, and even if the Haywards are not Negroes, so what?

Top Trio

Heading the group are three people of whom American can be mighty proud.

Dr. Anne Cooke, head of Howard's speech and drama department, is a dynamic and charming woman whose friends in the theater world are legion. Washington born, Anne got her Ph.D. from Yale. (When Blevins Davis heard the name Anne Cooke he asked: "Can this be the Anne Cooke I went to Yale drama school with?" It was.) A fatiguing illness and her father's recent death certainly marred Anne's anticipation of her fourth European tour, but she's been as gallant as ever in inspiring her associates.

James Butcher, jr., writer and wartime United States officer in Liberia, has been at Howard as instructor since 1934. When the Howard tour is finished, he will go to London for a year's residence under the Fulbright bill while his professor-wife teaches in France under the same act.

Owen Dodson, youngest of the team, has made a firm name for himself as a playwright, winning the Maxwell Anderson Verse Playwrighting Contest, the Rosenwald and Rockefeller Fellowships.

The group's final days were complicated by having to make their own scenery adaptable for the varied stages on which they'll play. They were honored by an inspiring reception and talk at the Norwegian Embassy by the Ambassador and Mrs. Munthe de Morgenstierne.

"Skol!" concluded the Ambassador, a toast they'll be hearing often on their trip. And one which their Washington well-wishers will proudly repeat: "Skol!"

BORN: To Loew's cheerful, ever-obliging publicity chief, Jack Foxe, and his wife, Violet, a girl, at G. W. Hospital Monday night . . . She'll be called Patricia Gene Foxe, that being in honor of the late Gene Ford, the Capitol's manager, one of Violet's favorite people.

YOUNGSTERS' JOY—Vic Damone, wonder boy of the younger set, will be singing his songs from the Capitol stage for the week beginning tomorrow

Double Indemnity Not for Gangsters, Life Firm Argues

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 30 (NYHT).—A gangster follows a mode of life that may reasonably be expected to be ended by murder, and his heirs are therefore not entitled to benefit by double indemnity clausees in his life insurance, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. argued in a brief made public in Superior Court here today.

The brief was filed in answer to a suit by Mrs. Elizabeth Yanowsky, widow of Charles Yanowsky, who was found dead of ice-pick wounds on July 18, 1948.

Yanowski had been an official of the International Longshoremen's Association (AFL), and his murder was ascribed by police either to waterfront gang differences or to the fact that he owed a gambler $38,000.

Miss Truman Fed Up On 'Missouri Waltz'

St. Louis, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Margaret Truman owned up today that her father's favorite "Missouri Waltz" leaves her cold.

"I don't care if I never hear it again," she told reporters who asked if she would sing her State song during a concert tour in October. Miss Truman said she got tired of the tune because "they played it at every whistle stop we made during the presidential campaign in 1948."

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

A FELLOW whose name wasn't even on the big league rosters until a month after the season opened is now threatening to pitch the Brooklyn Dodgers to the pennant, with a little help from the rest of the Dodgers' cast.

Don Newcombe, a giant of a colored man, who hasn't yielded a run in his last 21 innings of pitching for the Dodgers, could be the player to tip the scales in favor of Brooklyn in the stretch battle with the league-leading Cardinals.

POVICH

This Newcombe was famous before he was in the majors two months, you know. Billy Southworth picked him as one of the National League's All-Star pitchers in July despite the man's meager big league background. It was the shortest cut to All-Star fame in the history of the game.

At 27, Newcombe got a late start on a major league career but after the Dodgers did bring him up from Montreal in May the huge right hander wasted little time in establishing himself as something special among National League pitchers. The 13 games he has won, against only 6 defeats, stamp him second only to league-leading Pitcher Warren Spahn of the Braves.

THE DODGERS weren't planning to bring Newcombe up from the minors this year. With Montreal in 1948 he had jumped the team for an unauthorized visit with his family and gained the reputation of being a player hard to handle. That still goes, in a sense. The league's hitters are finding him hard to handle.

Newcombe is throwing the league's most fiery pitch. His physique typifies the fast ball pitcher. At 6 feet 3, weighing close to 215, he exudes power, and looks like the workhorse type. You can say that last again, because Newcombe has started five times for the Dodgers in the last 17 days, and one of his two defeats was a 12-inning, 2-1 affair with the Phillies.

More important to the Dodgers, Newcombe grabbed hold when it appeared they were going to slide right out of the race with the Cardinals. The Cardinals licked them two straight a fortnight ago, and in the finale of the series Newcombe went to work. He shut out the Cards with six hits and kept the Dodger pennant hopes alive.

NEWCOMBE'S sensational success is not exactly a surprise to Branch Rickey. The Dodgers' president did try to peddle him last winter, but not too seriously. He announced that Newcombe could be bought, but he put a $300,000 price tag on him and discouraged all offers.

Dodger Manager Burt Shotten wasn't reckoning at all on Newcombe this spring, and was quite content with what he thought was a good pitching staff. Shotten labeled Ralph Branca as the star of his staff along with Rex Barney. "If I had to name a pitcher to win us a 'must' game, I'd select Branca," said Shotten in the spring. Branca hasn't won two games in the last six weeks. Newcombe started off winning six of his first seven.

The Dodgers are now resting easily only a game and a half to the rear of the Cardinals despite the hitting slump of Jackie Robinson whose one-time .364 batting average has dropped 15 points. But Newcombe is finding the Dodgers a nice team to pitch for. They're still the fastest club in the league, and already this season they have banged 129 home runs, nine more than any Brooklyn team ever made in a full season.

NEWCOMBE could be Brooklyn's answer to the menacing one-two batting punch of Stan Musial and Enos Slaughter that the Cardinals are taking into the final month's campaign. There are three games remaining between the Brooks and the Cards and Newcombe gives the Dodgers the pitching edge in that series.

The Cardinals, meanwhile, have their own sensation. He is Enos Slaughter who, with a .328 batting average, is outhitting even Stan Musial. The nicest part about the hitting of such as Slaughter and Musial is that their hits win ball games. They're opportunists of the Joe DiMaggio-Tommy Henrich type and the biggest reason why the Cardinals are still in front.

Again it is the National League that is providing the hottest pennant race. Last year, when the AL race was the tightest, it was an exception. Usually it is the National that has a corner on September pennant interest. The Cardinals and Dodgers had to battle it out in a post-season play-off a few years back, and a repeat is not the remotest possibility.

Dente Scores Yost

Hittle Again Blanks Chisox, 1-0 With 3-Hit, 10-Inning Effort

Chicago, Aug. 30.—Rookie Lloyd Hittle pitched his second shutout of the season against Chicago as he let the White Sox down with three hits, and the Nats registered a 10-inning 1-0 victory before 11,972 fans here tonight.

Loser in the hot pitchers' duel was Lefty Bill Wight, who can blame himself for his eleventh win against 11 wins.

Wight had a five-hitter going into the bottom of the tenth, with one out, Eddie Yost singled to center. Then Wight, who is noted for his clever pickoff motion (he caught Sam Dente napping in the first inning(tried to catch Yost off guard, but his throw went wild.

Yost scooted all the way to third, and scored when Dente sent a deep fly to Dave Philley.

Hittle pitched his best game since joining the Nats in June. He surpassed even his eight-hit 1-to-0 victory over the Sox on August 7. He notched his fourth win againts four losses.

The Sox touched Hittle for singles in the fifth, seventh and ninth, and he walked four and fanned four. He was in trouble only in the ninth when Floyd Baker's single and walks to Philley and Luke Appling loaded the bases with one out. But Hittle extricated himself by getting Gus Zernial and Cass Michaels on short fly balls.

Marshall Expected To Abandon Denver When Contract's Up

Denver, Colo., Aug. 30 — George Marshall, owner of the Washington Redskins, today expressed strong dissatisfaction with various phases of the 'Skin's exhibition in Denver and left little doubt that the game will be moved to either New Orleans or Fort Worth when his contract with the Denver Post expires after 1950.

Marshall said that among other things he did not like his guarantee ($5000 less than for any one of the Redskins' four other exhibitions), the promotion of the event (it draws only about 15,000 spectators in a city of a quarter of a million), or the lights at the University of Denver Stadium.

Powers Reports Veeck Selling Out

New York, Aug. 30 (U.P.).—Sports Editor Jimmy Powers of the New York Daily News said tonight that Bill Veeck has sold his interest in the Cleveland Indians to Hank Greenberg, former first baseman of the Detroit Tigers and Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported a similar sale of the American League team last week. It was subsequently denied by Veeck and Greenberg.

In Cleveland, a somewhat harassed Greenberg said, "I've been denying that story since a Chicago paper printed it and I've denied it every day since then.

"I'll deny it today, tomorrow, the rest of the week—and through next week, too."

2 Home Runs Break Tiger Streak After 8 Victories

Detroit, Aug. 30 (AP)—Two home runs and a walk with the bases loaded enabled the Boston Red Sox to snap eight-game winning streaks today for both the Detroit Tigers and Pitcher Freddie Hutchinson. The score was 3 to 0.

With Ellis Kinder scattering five Detroit hits, the game might as well have ended after the second inning. In that frame Vernon Stephens hit his 35th home run with the bases empty.

The only damaging result from Hutchinson's wildness came in the fifth inning.

After Dominic DiMaggio singled, Johnny Pesky walked. Ted Williams advanced both with an infield out. Stephens was purposely passed to load the bases. But Hutch couldn't settle down and walked Bobby Doerr, forcing DiMaggio across the plate.

DiMaggio's eighth home run after two were out finished off the scoring in the ninth.

Until today Hutchinson had been the hottest Tiger hurler in recent weeks. His resurgence had been in a large way responsible for Detroit's climb from the American League's fifth to fourth place.

The victory was Kinder's seventeenth against only five losses. Kinder, former St. Louis Brown hurler, turned in a masterful job. He struck out seven, walked only three and failed to give up a single extra-base blow.

Scarborough Called Home

Chicago, Aug. 30—Ray Scarborough, Washington's leading pitcher with a 10 won, 10 lost record, left the team here today to return to his home in Mt. Olive, N. C., due to serious illness in his family.

The righthander was called home due to his father-in-law's illness. Unless present plans are altered, Scarborough plans to rejoin the Nats Saturday when they return to Washington to open a weekend series against the pace-making Yankees.

With Scarborough unavailable for duty here, Manager Joe Kuhel planned to pitch Lloyd Hittle, the little lefty who beat the White Sox 1-0 in a recent game in Washington, tonight and Sid Hudson tomorrow. Paul Calvert, providing he's able to shake off a severe cold, will probably pitch the series finale here Thursday night.

Braves Rout Cards, 12-4, To Cut Lead

Boston, Aug. 30 (AP).—For most of the season Boston's Braves have been "cousins" to the St. Louis Cardinals, losing 15 of 19 games, but today the Tribesmen turned on the National League leaders, walloping them 12 to 4.

The victory, hammered out before 18,607 paid fans as the Braves observed "Appreciation Day," reduced the Red Birds' National League lead to a game and a half over the Brooklyn Dodgers, who beat Pittsburgh today.

Five Cardinal pitchers gave up 16 hits for 31 bases.

Among the Braves' solid clouts were homers by Jeff Heath, Bill Salkeld, and Sibby Sisti. Heath led the Boston attack with four runs batted in, three on his eighth homer of the year. Sisti drove in three and Bill Salkeld two, both on four base swats.

The Tribe grabbed an early lead by scoring once in the first inning on a triple sliced into the right field corner by Ed Stanky and Sisti's infield out.

Until the seventh inning, when Stan Musial poled his 27th homer into the right field bleachers with Marty Marion aboard, the Cards had made but three hits and had scored twice on righthander Vern Bickford.

Both Bickford and the Cardinal starter, Red Munger, left the game because of injuries. Bickford hurt his arm pitching in the fourth and was replaced in the top of the ninth by Bob Hogue.

Munger pulled a muscle in his side while batting in the top of the third.

Clutch Homer Wins for Bums

Brooklyn, Aug. 30 (AP).—Gil Hodges blased his twenty-first homer of the year with a runner aboard in the ninth inning today to give the Brooklyn Dodgers their fourth straight victory, 4-3, over Pittsburgh.

The last ditch triumph, coupled with Boston's 12-4 conquest of St. Louis, enable the Brooks to cut the Cardinals' first place lead to 1½ games.

Murry Dickson, little Pittsburgh righthander, seemed well on his way to victory through the first eight innings. He had shackled the Dodgers with four hits, then he fell victim to his big weakness, the gopher ball.

Turnesa Squeezes By

Bub Worsham Wins, Bogart Loses in Golf

Rochester, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP).—Willie Turnesa won the first match in the defense of his United States amateur golf title, 1 up, over Harold Freeman of Glencoe, Ill., here today.

Of Washington, D. C.'s two hopefuls, Marvin (Bubby) Worsham was the only one to win. He knocked in a one-putt birdie three on the 334-yard fourteenth hole to beat Bob Jacobsono of Deal, N. J., 6 and 4, in the second round.

Ralph Bogart lost his second round match to Harry C. Offutt, jr., of Fort Wayne, Ind., 2 and 1.

Worsham stepped off to a quick 2-up lead with a par four on the second and a deuce on the 201-yard third. He was never seriously threatened thereafter.

Bogart could never get the lead from Offut, who was only one over par when they quit. Ralph's game finally fell apart completely on the sixteenth, where he picked up without carding a score.

Tomorrow Worsham plays Frank Strafaci of Flushing, N. Y., at 7:54 a. m.

Spencer Overton Beaten

Playing in first round competition earlier in the day Spencer Overton, of Baltimore, had his aspirations blasted by Fred Kammer, jr., Grosse Point Farms, Mich., 3 and 2.

Turnesa, the lone amateur in a family of six golfing brothers, spun a brilliant two-under par 69 over the 6,800 tree-studded yards of the Oak Hill County Club's East course to subdue Harold Foreman of Glencoe, Ill., for a 1 up triumph.

Moving into tomorrow's pair of 18-hole rounds with Turnesa were such American stalwarts as Ray Billows of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., runner-up to Turnesa last year; Frank Stranahan, the well-muscled millionaire of Toledo; and Robert H. (Skee) Riegel of Tulsa, Okla.

Riegel and Stranahan each won with ease and play each other in tomorrow morning's third round. The fourth round, also of 18 holes, will be played tomorrow afternoon.

Riegel matched Pat today in eliminating Pat Mucci of Paterson, N. J., 6 and 5. Stranahan romped to 5 and 4 verdict over Norman Mann of Los Angeles. Billows birdied the 20th hole to win from Eugene Bates of Portland, Ore.

U. S. Cupmen Advance

All members of the U. S. cup team came through except Ted Bishop of Islington, Mass. He bowed to John Kraft, Denver school teacher, in a first round match completed this morning, 3 and 2. Kraft lost to Robert Goldwater of Phoenix, Ariz., by the same score in the second round.

Charley Coe of the cup team, was a 4 and 3 winner over C. T. Garth, jr., of Beaumont, Tex.; Bruce McCormick of Hollywood, defeated Thomas Pierce of Rutland, Vt., 7 and 5; Jim McHale of Bethlehem, Pa., downed John Busemeyer of Wyoming, Ohio, 3 and 2, and John Dawson of Hollywood, defeated Laddie Lucas, captain of the British cup team, 4 and 2.

Max McCready, British amateur champion, and Ronnie White, regarded as the best shot maker among the Britons were eliminated by Dan Carmichael of Columbus, Ohio, 5 and 4, and P. J. Boatwright, jr., of Spartanburg, S. C., 3 and 2.

Hottest round of the day was the card turned in by Harry H. Moorhead of Louisville, Ky., who was five under par for the 12 holes needed to send Horton Semple back to Sewickley, Pa., with an 8 and 6 licking.

Cooper Proves Answer to District Promoter's Prayers, But Where Does He Go From Here?

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

EVER SINCE THE COLLAPSE of Aaron Perry and Smuggy Hursey, Washington fight promoters have been on the prowl for a top-flight local attraction.

They found their boy at Griffith Stadium Monday night in 21-year-old Jimmy Cooper, but today they're muttering, "what are we going to do with him?"

Cooper surprised everyone, Manuel Ortiz more than any, by licking the puffed up bantamweight champ in a 10-round nontitle thriller.

The immediate solution to the problem of what to do with Cooper would be to toss him in against the 32-year-old Ortiz again, but that's not as simple as it sounds.

Promoter Florence Turner and Matchmaker Gabe Menendez, under whose sponsorship young Coop has waged all of his local battles, would give up practically anything to bring the pair together again pronto, but it can't be arranged.

ORTIZ sails for England September 3 for three months work there and on the continent.

The colorful little Mexican is quite willing to put his title on the line against Cooper, but not for $3000, his Monday payday. For a championship tiff, the price is $25,000, American, not pesos.

The Turner syndicate could probably raise the 25 g's, but they would be stymied for a place to hold the affair. Their bandbox arena is too small and they wouldn't even listen to a suggestion that they move it to competitor Mike Uline's Arena.

The Armory? "Possibly," said Mrs. Turner. "But first, let's get the match."

Meanwhile, Matchmaker Menendez is trying to hustle up an opponent for Cooper for September 15, his last date at Griffith Stadium. He's tinkering with the idea of bringing in Fulberto Osario. Osario trimmed Cooper at Turner's last winter and is the only fighter with whom Coop hasn't evened the count.

PITTING Cooper against the likes of Osario after Jimmy's stunning win over Ortiz isn't much match, even Menendez admits. But who's he going to get? Featherweight Champ Willie Pep? Sandy Saddler, Pep's No. 1 rival?

"What, and get Cooper murdered?" Menendez exclaimed. "Cooper's still a baby. He isn't ready for Pep and Saddler. Next summer he'll be, but not now."

Eager to cash in on the fame Cooper gained against Ortiz Monday, Jimmy's brain trust may move him up to New York.

Chris Dundee, former Washington manager now operating in Manhattan, was a ringside spectator Monday and drooled over the prospects of carting Cooper off to New York.

Unless Menendez can furnish Cooper with action immediately, Washingtonians next glimpse of their new favorite will be through a video screen.

'Skins Lead Lions, 31-0 At Halftime

By Bill Burnett
Post Reporter

Denver, Colo., Aug. 30.—There was every prospect of a bitter struggle tonight as the Washington Redskins, fancying themselves National Football League title timber, met the highly improved Lions of Detroit in Denver University Stadium.

Unleashing a 24-point offensive in the second period, the 'Skins took a 31-0 lead over the Lions at halftime.

Only 15,000 Rocky Mountain fans, the smallest crowd which will see a Redskin exhibition this year, were expected to see both clubs make their second preseason starts. Proceeds after the teams are paid $15,000 each go to Denver Post Charities, Inc.

Although favored by as many as three touchdowns earlier, the Redskins were fading favorites as game time neared. The experts somehow figured Washington should win by 10 points, but there were plenty of dopesters who thought the Lions could take it all.

Against the 26 veterans and 13 scintillating rookies on the Redskin squad, Coach Bo McMillin expects to hurl what he believes prospectively is one of the best Detroit teams of all time. It still has the nucleus of the cellar-dwelling club of 1948, winner of only two games but the cause of a lot of worry among Western division powers.

FIRST PERIOD

Washington took the opening kickoff and marched to a touchdown in 15 plays, covering 80 yards. For the first time in years, Sammy Baugh did not handle the Redskins' first offensive. This time Harry Gilmer ran the team, capping the drive with a 22-yard pass to Bones Taylor in the corner of the end zone. It was only the fourth pass in the series, coming after 6:15 of action. Poillon's conversion was good.

The Lions moved 23 yards the first time they got the ball, but then stalled and there was an exchange of punts between Poillon and Jimmy Youell, former Redskin quarterback. As the period ended Youell's punt was hurried by Herb Shoener and on the first Washington play a 55-yard aerial, Gilmer to Taylor again, put the Skins only 3 yards away from another score but the play was called back and the Redskins penalized for clipping.

From their own 25 the Tribe then charged to midfield where the period ended.

Eagles Prove Superiority

Chicago, Aug. 30 (AP).—The Philadelphia Eagles, looking and feeling like National Football League champions, left for Hot Springs, Ark., and a bit of rest today after routing the Chicago Cardinals, 51 to 14, in an exhibition game last night.

The "playoff" of last December's NFL disputed championship game in snow-bound Philadelphia when the Eagles downed the western division titlists, 7 to 0, was witnessed by 36,992 fans in Comiskey Park.

The Eagles scored three touchdowns in the opening period and then sped to a 37 to 0 half-time margin over the bewildered Cards. The victors' seven touchdowns were scored by seven players, four of them cashing in on Tommy Thompson's passes.

The Chicagoans scored their two touchdowns on a pass and a plunge in the final two periods as the Eagles began to let up. It was the first game of the season for the losers.

For the Eagles the win followed an impressive 35 to 0 decision over the Green Bay Packers and a 38 to 0 triumph over the College All Stars.

Pete Pihos, Neill Armstrong, Jack Ferrante and Jim Parmer were on the scoring end of six-point passes by Thompson. Earlier, Frank Ziegler and Bosh Pritchard scored on running plays. Frank Reagan skipped 25 yards with an intercepted pass for the final Eagle marker.

Metro League Stars Open Practice Tonight

Coach Jim Castiglia will send his 160-pound Metropolitan Amateur Football League All-Stars through their first drill at Edgewood field tonight at 6 o'clock as they start priming for their game with Northeast Body Works, defending league champion, at Gonzaga field Sunday, September 18.

The opening attraction of a doubleheader will bring together Car Credit, three-year undefeated Metro League unlimited champion, and Anacostia Eagles, runner-up to Car Credit last season, at 12:30 p. m.

Naval Gun Girls Win, 6-5, for Title

The Naval Gun Factory girls softball team erased a 5-1 deficit and nosed out the American Automobile Association girls, 6-5, to win the Class B championship of the D. C. Recreation League yesterday at the Lincoln Memorial. Betty Tierney hurled a seven-hitter and Mary Love banged out a triple, double and a single in three trips to pace the winners.

Mailanders Top Garvins

The Mailanders defeated Garvin's Grill, 6-2, yesterday at Greenbelt in the first game of a best two-out-three series for the Amateur Softball Association girls championship. Janet Graham hit a home run and two singles for the Mailanders.

Browns Led By Sievers And Spence; Silvera Hurt

St. Louis, Aug. 30 (AP).—Rookie Sievers batted in three runs to help the St. Louis Browns humble the top-running New York Yankees, 6 to 2, tonight.

Stan Spence contributed two other Brownie runs and hit two doubles. The defeat left the Yankees just three games ahead of the Boston Red Sox in the American League race.

Sievers singled in two runners in the first inning following two hits and a sacrifice off starter Ed Lopat. In the third he singled again, scoring Spence from second.

In the fourth Al Papai's bunt and Ed Lopat's wild throw brought Dick Kokos home from third. Lopat then walked Bob Dillinger and Spence hit his second two-bagger, bringing in Johnny Sullivan and Papai, and knocking Lopat from the game.

Lopat accounted for the first New York run in the third with a homer. In the seventh Cliff Mapes walked, reached third on a single and a force play and scored on Jerry Coleman's ground out.

Ken Silvera suffered a severe cut on his head when he was struck by the bat of Les Moss in the first inning. Moss had just missed a strike and in his follow-through the bat carried back to strike Silvera. It was reported several stitches were required to close the wound.

Timonium Opens Race Meeting Today

Maryland's half-mile racing season moves into Timonium, 12 miles northwest of Baltimore, today for a ten-program stand. Following this meeting, only Marlboro, opening September 12, will remain on the minor track agenda. Laurel is scheduled to start the fall major track season on September 24.

Timonium's racing, conducted along with the fair, has been popular around the Monumental City area for many years. As usual, the session has drawn an adequate number of horses, the overflowing being stabled at Pimlico some ten miles away.

The opening day feature is the fifth event, with seven thoroughbreds of the 3-year-old and upwards variety vying at a mile and a sixteenth. The field includes Snowstorm, Lenea and Ropley, each a winner during the recently concluded Bel Air session.

The program numbers races at distances of from five furlongs to a mile and an eighth and events for 2-year-olds, 3-year-olds and older horses.

Otis Printz Yields Only Three Hits

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

After a lapse of one year, Heurich's Brewers, The Washington Post-Industrial League champions, yesterday regained the city sandlot baseball crown by blanking Northeast Body Works, 3-0, on the South Ellipse.

Otis Printz, veteran curve baller righthander, granted only three hits to Northeast, and permitted only three men to reach second base, all after two were out.

Jet Motors, last year's city champion, failed to qualify for the championship round robin.

Heurich will represent Washington in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association Tournament which opens at Griffith Stadium next Tuesday with 16 cities competing.

Slender Bernie Myles hurled a splendid five-hitter for Northeast, but his teammates failed to back him up. Jim Castiglia, former Redskins and Philadelphia Athletics athlete, smacked Myles for the game's big hit, a tremendous triple to center in the second inning and trotted in on Jim Francis' infield hopper.

In the fifth, Francis, got credit for a home run when Centerfielder Sonny Settle and Leftfielder Eli Blank collided while chasing his routine fly ball. The Brewers' good-measure run came across in the ninth on Red Giegerich's single, a sacrifice and Manager Pepco Barry's hit to center.

British Star Ousts Mrs. Ann Gray in U. S. Tennis

Del Bello Beaten by Jim Brink

By Gayle Talbot

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP).—Tall Jim Brink of Seattle, who was supposed to have departed the national tennis championships yesterday, southpawed his way blithely into the third round today at the expense of another seeded player.

Yesterday the grinning "outsider" from the West Coast knocked out Victor Seixas, ninth-seeded Philadelphia stylist, in a furious five-setter that sent the Forest Hills crowd home to a late supper.

Today he more than took care of Marcello Del Bello, stocky Italian Davis Cup player who was seeded eighth among the foreigners. The scores were 6—4, 6—0, 6—1, and it was brutal. Brink slugged away with such terrific pace and accuracy that Del Bello, in the second set, made only one point in three services.

Mrs. Gray Loses

Washington's Mrs. Ann Gray bowed in her second round match to Jean Quertier, Britain, 6—4, 6—2.

After holding her serve in the first game, Mrs. Gray was completely overpowered by her opponent's blistering service and powerful forehand, and failed to garner another game in the first set.

In the second set, Miss Quertier had her blonde adversary baffled with a variety of shots including a deft drop shot which she undercut off her backhand side.

Mrs. Gray registered her only service break of the day in the sixth game of the second set when she narrowed Miss Quertier's edge to 4-2. In the next two games the British ace lost only two points to take the match.

Virginia University's Hal Burrows, only District of Columbia area entry left in the tournament, did not play this afternoon but will face Bob Abdesselam of France tomorrow. The Frenchman thumped Washington's two-time National Junior champ, Gil Bogley, yesterday.

Mrs. Rurac Coasts Again

Mrs. Magda Rurac, Middle Atlantic titlist, continued her string of wins with an easy 6—1, 6—1, spanking Mrs. Madge (Bunny) Vosters from Secane, Pa.

In the mixed doubles events, Mrs. Molly Blair of England and Eustace Fannin, South Africa, came from behind to drop Gil Bogley and Maureen Connolly of San Diego, 4—6, 6—3, 6—1.

For a time today the stadium crowd thought it saw a real stunner in the making. That was when Tony Trabert, Junior Davis Cupper from Cincinnati, fought off five set points while winning a marathon first set from fourth-seeded Gardnar Mulloy of Miami, 12—10.

But instead of being tired after an hour and eight minutes of play, the 35-year-old Mulloy proved fresher than the youngster and proceeded to crush him in the next three sets, 6—2, 6—1, 6—3.

The women completed their second round without the sign of an upset. Blonde Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, the Wimbledon champion, gave the day's most convincing display in overpowering Lois Felix of Meriden, Conn., 6—0, 6—0.

Seven Gain Positions On Wightman Team

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 30.—Mrs. Margaret Osborne Dupont, Wilmington, Del.; Miss Louise Brough, Beverly Hills, Calif.; Miss Doris Hart, Jacksonville, Fla.; Miss Shirley J. Fry, Akron, Ohio; Mrs. Patricia C. Todd, LaJolla, Calif.; Miss Gertrude Moran and Miss Beverly Baker, Santa Monica, Calif., were named today as members of the United States Wightman Cup team. Mrs. Richard Buck is nonplaying captain.

The Wightman Cup matches between the United States and England will be played on the grass courts of the Merion Cricket Club, Haverford, Pa., September 9 and 10.

Expect to Score, Too

O'Doherty, Rose, Ex-Backs, Welcome Shift to Hilltop Line

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

AT BEST, football practice in sweltering Washington is a tough grind.

But for two of the Georgetown gridders going through preseason paces at the Hilltop there doesn't figure to be too much glamour all season.

Connie O'Doherty and Billy Rose, both backfield starters last year, have been shifted to guard and are working diligently to earn berths at that unsung position.

Surprisingly, both are enthusiastic about the change. Maybe it should be explained that they were blocking backs—they're used to anonymity.

For instance, O'Doherty didn't carry the ball once last year. The 26-year old senior, who took time out from his athletic career to serve overseas with the marines, thinks the change is a break for him.

Said O'Doherty, "I want to coach; line experience won't do me a bit of harm. Then, too, I didn't figure to do much in a T-formation backfield. Most of these young kids are too fast for me."

ROSE had more of a fling on the offense. The 20-year-old Newark lad scored three touchdowns and rated right behind End George Benigni as the Hoyas' leading pass receiver last year.

But Billy's the type of boy who'll try anything. Last year, he was undefeated as a light heavyweight boxer until he broke his hand after hitting his John Carroll opponent with too much enthusiasm. He throws a mean javelin, too.

Rose said, "The blocks are much the same and I think there'll be a little more fun in the line."

They're still backs at heart, though. They insist they'll do some scoring.

"We won't have to block kicks to do it either," explained O'Doherty, "we'll steal that ball."

The native of Woburn, Mass., whose undying ambition is for Georgetown to beat Boston College, added "That's not all we'll steal from B. C. this year."

French Stars To Play Here On Net Tour

By Jules Loh

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. 30.—The French Davis Cup team, consisting of Bob Abdesselam and Paul Remy, will arrive in Washington September 4, on the second stop of an exhibition tour with Washington's two-time National junior champ, Gil Bogley, and Virginia University's Hal Burrows.

Bogley will play Remy at 2:30 p. m. on the Columbia Country Club courts and Abdesselman will face Burrows on the Kenwood Country Club courts at the same time. When the singles matches are over Bogley will team up with Burrows and play the Frenchmen in doubles at Kenwood.

The four will play at the L'Hirondale Club in Baltimore Saturday and on Monday will go to Burrow's home town of Charlottesville, Va., where they will play at the Farmington Country Club. The matches will be somewhat of a rivalry affair since Abdesselam beat Bogley in straight sets in the National Amateur Championships at the West Side Tennis Club here yesterday and will face Burrows in the same tournament tomorrow.

The tour was arranged by Hollis Dann, chairman of the International Exhibitions Committee of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and by Alphonso Smith, president of the District of Columbia Tennis Association.

Canter Tops Georgetown

Canter Furniture defeated the Georgetown softballers, 6-5, on the Takoma Recreation Field yesterday.

109 Juniors Tee Off for District Title

The best young golfers in this area will tee off today in the third annual District of Columbia junior open championship tournament at Georgetown Prep.

The first day will be devoted to qualifying play by 109 starters. This is a big increase over last year's field, which numbered 85.

Naval Gun Factory Orders Layoffs For 711 Employes

The big Naval Gun Factory here yesterday gave out 30-day layoff notices to 711 of its employes.

The cutback will bring the work force down to 7700 employes, about 20,000 below its wartime high. The factory had more than 11,000 employes earlier this year.

This latest reduction was ordered by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson who last week directed the military agencies to wipe out 135,000 civilian jobs. At that time the Secretary said the Gun Factory would have to abolish 2293 jobs from its July 31 total. Most of the reductions had already taken place and it was necessary to discharge only 711 additional people to get within the new ceiling fixed by the Defense Secretary.

Nearly all of the 711 employes to be fired have career Civil Service status. A number of them have been in Government 20 and more years. The last major layoff in July wiped out all but a handful of temporary employes and a few people with 20-odd years of service were fired at that time.

Yesterday's layoff notices went to employes in all job classifications in direct proportion to their number. Machinists, laborers, and helpers in the so-called "blue-collar" class, and clerks, designers, planners, and estimators in the "white-collar" group were among those to get the notices.

Laid-off career employes will have their names placed on a list and they will be called back in reverse order of their layoffs to fill vacancies. Unless something unforseen happens, the factory does not expect to make additional reductions in force for a indefinite period.

BENEFITS: You can look for a new move in Congress to cover laid-off Federal workers under the unemployment compensation system. Several members of Congress who represent states where layoffs are being made will push the plan.

The President already is on record in favor of it. Several years ago the Senate approved a bill which would have temporarily brought Federal workers under a system of unemployment compensation, but it failed in the House.

NOTES: William W. Davis has joined the electronics division at the Bureau of Standards. He was with the Naval Ordnance Laboratory here . . . Among those who will retire today from the Veterans Administration here are: William B. Bauman, Daniel J. Broderick, Jesse R. Clough, Thomas J. Frailey, William W. Flood, Hortense Freeman, Margaret K. Hughes, Bessie M. Jordon, James H. Manning, Walter L. Robertson, and Percival W. Webster . . . At Commerce, these employes are retiring: Dr. Joseph F. Brewster of the Bureau of Standards; Vincent H. Todd of the Patent Office; Ben Grady of the Census Bureau; Florence A. Henderson of the Patent Office, and Charles F. Zimmerman of the Coast & Geodetic Survey.

The bill to fix 6 p. m. as the starting hour for night differential pay is before the President. Daylight or standard time—it would still be 6 p. m. . . . Federal employment in the executive agencies here slipped 600 in July to a total of 216,600. Commerce and VA reported the largest increase while reductions were made by the Army and Navy. Over the entire country the decrease in the Federal population was 5300 to 1,923,200 . . . Temporary engineers here in grades P-2 through P-5 whose jobs aren't converted to permanent by October 30 must be laid off. The only exceptions are highway and highway bridge engineers . . . Civil Service has ruled that a suspension from a Federal job will no longer be considered a break in service. In other words, the time served before the suspension will be counted toward an automatic in-grade promotion . . . W. A. G. Clark, a nationally known textile expert, is retiring from the Tariff Commission.

AFL's National Federation of Letter Carriers, a respected and influential employe group of nearly 1,000,000 members, is celebrating its sixtieth birthday this week. William C. Doherty is its president . . . Carrie Lawton, the first woman attorney at the Civil Aeronautics Board, is retiring today after 36 years of service. . .Upwards of 1000 former Federal workers who were under 55 and who had 25 or more years of service when they were laid off between July 1, 1945 and June 30, 1947, are now eligible for Civil Sirvice pensions under a recently enacted law.

$3,000,000 Sewer Bond Gets Fairfax District O. K.

30-Year Issue To Provide Area With Facilities In About 2 Years

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

By a vote of 558 to 421, Fairfax County's Sanitary District No. 1 yesterday approved by referendum a three-million-dollar bond issue to provide itself with sewer facilities.

Both the total vote cast—979—and the margin by which the bonds carried—137—were near the figures predicted by the program's supporters.

The district is a 30 square mile strip along the border of Falls Church, Arlington and Alexandria. It contains about 25,000 persons, of which perhaps 3000 were qualified to vote.

James J. Corbalis, county sanitary engineer, said work on the program is expected to start in November and shou.d be completed within two years.

The program will include: Purchase from the Government of a trunk sewer the county now leases, construction of a sewage treatment plant, installation of 44 miles of subtrunk and collecting sewers, and acquisition of 30 miles of existing sewers and two pumping stations from private developers.

30-Year Bonds

The county intends to redeem the bonds over a 30-year period by: (1) Levying a 20-cent per $100 tax on all property in the district, (2) charging connection fees of from $150 to $300, (3) levying a service charge on persons using the system, (4) special contracts with outside communities and (5) special connection inspection fees.

The bond issue was put across by Bailey's Crossroads, Groveton and Falls Church No. 1 Precincts—the areas which stand to gain most from the sewer installation program. The totals from these precincts were 460 for the bond issue and 212 against.

Falls Church Precinct No. 1 is outside the City of Falls Church. Residents of the City of Falls Church did not vote in the referendum, although its city officials had vigorously opposed the issue.

Falls Church Precinct No. 2, also outside the city, cast only two votes, the smallest of any of the eight county precincts involved.

City May Build

The City of aFlls Church now probably will build its own sewerage treatment plant, its city attorney, LaRue Van Meter, said after learning the referendum results.

The city, which now uses the trunk sewer under contract with the county to dispose of 75 per cent of its sewage, had objected to paying what the county said would be about 10 times the present use charge. It had also protested that the plan for financing the program was unsound—even unconstitutional.

"We'd probably have to build our plant anyhow," Van Meter said. "The county says we can only put 900,000 gallons a day through the system, and we're up to that now."

Returns of the election will be submitted to the Fairfax County Circuit Court at its next session September 19, County Sanitary Engineer Corbalis said. The court will instruct the county board of supervisors to market the bonds, Corbalis said, and money should be available to start work on the treatment plant and installing sewers in Groveton by November.

The first sewers will be installed in Groveton, Corbalis stated, because detailed plans have already been prepared there.

The following are the complete returns on the referendum. The small vote cast in some precincts was due to the fact that only small parts of some precincts were within the boundaries of the sanitary district.

Precinct	For	Against
The Lick	10	65
Falls Church No. 1	136	64
Falls Church No. 2	1	1
Annandale	24	5
Baileys	180	40

Camp in Virginia Helps Children With Heart Trouble . . .

TIME OUT—A former blue baby relaxes in his own peculiar squatting position as other youngsters with cardiac trouble hike to the swimming hole at Camp Sunshine, near Triangle, Va. The Washington Heart Association runs the camp

First Child Cardiac Campers Finish Slow Motion Sojourn

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Triangle, Va., Aug. 30.—The 11-year-old boy looked like a rabbit, squatting on his legs there in the woods. He waited, letting the oxygen flow into his body. He reminded you of the way a rabbit, or a robin, moves through the woods.

He got up, walked about 20 paces, squatted again, his breath coming just slightly fast now, his ribs heaving a bit through the thin flesh.

The boy was a "blue baby," and he was employing the characteristic squat, the legs made into a seat—a sight one feels a nameless pang to see—of those children whose hearts are not the same as others.

Symbol of Experiment

He was the symbol of a notable experiment which came to an end—or perhaps only began—yesterday in the fertile forests of Prince William County, near here.

At Camps Sunshine and Wonderland, 72 children with heart defects wound up their two weeks at the first cardiac camp in the history of the Washington area.

It has been like a slow-motion version of the fervent life of a regular boys' camp.

Baseball is played, but bases are not run.

Hikes Taken by Bus

Overnight hikes are simulated by taking the children in the early morning seven miles in a bus—they could never walk it, as other children do—and letting them cook their breakfast by the lake.

The children walk downhill to swim but cannot walk uphill, so are driven back.

Instead of vigorous foot races, there are slow-gaited nature walks through the woods.

The self-consciousness which this pace would induce in the cardiac child in a regular group is eliminated. It is, after all, the pace of everyone around him.

The idea for the camps began three years back when John Crawley, secretary of the Summer Outings Committee of the Family Service Association, got sick to his soul of seeing so many children turned down for campaign because their hearts wouldn't meet the usual hectic standard.

This year the committee and the Washington eHart Association decided to give the Washington area children a camp of their own.

Not the least remarkable change wrought among the cardiac children has been the knowledge gained by many of them that they can do things they had come to believe were impossible for them.

One boy, said Mrs. Reo Purcell, 1710 Preston rd., Alexandria, whose efficiency as director of Camp Sunshine is reflected everywhere in its neatness, had been overprotected by his parents to the point his mind was stuck with one idea. If he moved around, he would be sick.

Afraid to Tie Shoes

When he first came to camp he was afraid even to tie his shoes, many times had to be carried piggyback to the mess hall. Yesterday he was walking there like the rest of them—and tying his own shoes.

The parent of another boy, a blue baby who was in the hospital all last year, asked the distance of everything in camp, said his boy couldn't walk 10 steps.

Yesterday a visit to the boy's cabin revealed the rather spectacular sight of the boy perched atop a seven-man pyramid he and his cabin-mates were practicing for the evening talent show. The entire cabin, by the way, was the "weakest" group in the camp.

This is not to say that the camp is curing the children of their heart ailments.

But it is letting these children, who in the city are the ones who begin to play, know that there is a whole lot of fun in life for them, too.

It is all just a matter of running stand on the side when the others the film in slow motion.

REST PERIOD—Children who are supposed to be quiet wind up doing something like this unless Camp Sunshine's counselors keep an eye on them. At top of the pyramid here is a former blue baby; others are among the weakest in camp

PUC Spokesman Urges Merger For 5 Utilities

Savings Seen for Washington Gas Light Company and District Consumers

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

A District Public Utilities Commission spokesman yesterday urged merger of the Washington Gas Light Co. with its four Maryland and Virginia subsidiaries.

V. A. McElfresh, PUC chief accountant, said such a corporate consolidation would mean a "considerable saving" to both the parent company and all Washington area consumers.

The proposal came up as hearings were resumed on the local utility firm's request for a 5 per cent rate increase to District consumers.

The area-wide merger suggestion ties in with two other recent gas rate developments:

1. The pending Federal Power Commission investigation of wholesale rates charged by the Washington Gas Light Co. to the Rosslyn Gas Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary. The FPC inquiry followed complaints by the Arlington County board of commissioners that the Rosslyn firm has been discriminated against by its own parent company, and

2. A District Building conference last week between the District PUC and representatives of Maryland and Virginia regulatory agencies with an eye to establishing uniform gas rates throughout Greater Washington.

PUC Chairman James H. Flanagan ruled that the merger proposal was not germane to the pending rate case.

Yesterday's rate hearing, in which the gas company is seeking an additional $900,000 income from higher rates, centered on PUC efforts to whittle away fragments of the firm's financial statement.

McElfresh's analysis on the stand attempted to show that the company overestimated by 7.9 per cent—or $88,078—its net revenue for the year ending last May 31.

PUC testimony also indicated that the company overestimated its total investment for rate-making purposes by 1.67 per cent, or $538,974, and that its rate of return from sales of gas to District consumers was 4.16 per cent last year rather than the stated 3.79 per cent.

Appeal Renewed

Meanwhile, William A. Roberts, counsel for the Gas Consumers and Independent Appliance Dealers, renewed his appeal to the Commissioners yesterday to prosecute the gas company "for violations of the District law covering installation of gas appliances."

The intervening group has held that the gas company is unfairly competing with the independent plumbers in the installation and merchandising fields. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West is expected to give the city heads a ruling shortly on the appliance controversy which repeatedly arose yesterday.

4 Other Cities

Truck Strike Threatens Washington

A tieup of the freight trucking industry here and in four other cities in Maryland and Virginia is in prospect Thursday as result of a contract dispute between AFL teamsters and the transfer company operators.

The drivers are seeking an area wage agreement covering Washington, Baltimore, Cumberland and Hagerstown, Md., and Winchester, Va. The current contracts in the five cities expire simultaneously at 12:01 a. m. Thursday. Over 2000 drivers and helpers are covered by the agreement.

Negotiations here are being conducted between the labor relations council of the District Trucking Association and Local 639 of the AFL Teamsters Union. The association represents a dozen operators, and it usually sets the wage pattern for an equal number of nonassociation truckers here. The local represents 450 drivers and helpers.

According to Charles Bell, spokesman for Local 638, and Joseph Mc Garraghy, attorney for the truckers, there are two major points of dispute:

1. The teamsters want a contract providing equal wages and conditions for the freight drivers in the five cities.

2. The teamsters are seeking an area wage rate of $1.45.

Washington freightmen presently get $1.18 an hour for a 48-hour week. The union is seeking a 40-hour week, with an increase in pay sufficient to raise the hourly rate to $1.45.

The operators involved in the dispute pick up and deliver freight for all the railroads here and carry the bulk of the freight hauled in this area by truck. The dispute does not involve Railway Express, which has a work contract with another union.

Radio Strike Threat Averted at WTOP

After a day-long session between management and labor officials at radio station WTOP, both sides agreed last night a strike of technicians set for midnight tonight will be averted by peaceful settlement.

The two groups reported "considerable progress" at the close of yesterday's session.

The 32 union members of the Radio Broadcasting Engineers Local 1215 AFL are asking across-the-board pay increases and three weeks vacation. Their contract expired on May 27 and they are freed from the no-strike clause at midnight.

Present wages for the technicians range from $62.50 to $125 with two weeks paid vacation.

Meanwhile, a Federal conciliator will meet today with representatives of management and labor leaders of the AFL Plasterers' Union in an effort to end the 13-day walkout by 500 plasterers.

The plasterers struck after management rejected their demand for a 2 per cent health and hospitalization fund.

In the two-day strike here by the 175 employes of the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co., union officials last night announced no new developments.

The workers, members of the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 77 and Teamsters Union, Local 639, both AFL, struck Monday after a flat increase of 25 cents per hour for all employes was rejected.

The unions turned down a proposal by management for hospitalization insurance or a bonus plan as alternates to the wage increase.

Fines Caused By Cooling Unit

An Alexandria supermarket and its manager were fined in Alexandria Police Court yesterday because of the antics of a cooling unit in the rear of the store. The fines, however, were suspended.

Neighbors complained that the cooling unit behind the Master Supermarket at 1509 Mount Vernon ave. caused "loud, disturbing and unnecessary noises" and "splashed water great distances."

Store Manager George F. McGee, 35, and the Master Supermarket Corp. were convicted in June but the fines deferred for correction of the situation. Yesterday, when it was reported the nuisance had ceased, they were fined $50 each and assessed $3 costs. The fines were suspended on condition it not happen again within two years.

Democrats Indorse Houston for Judgeship

The District Democratic Central Committee yesterday indorsed Attorney Charles Houston for appointment to one of the newly created Federal District Court judgeships.

At the same time, a spokesman said the committee took a "we-have-just-begun-to-fight" attitude on District home rule. Members were assigned to contact House members in anticipation of a petition to force the Senate-approved bill to the House floor despite unfavorable action of the House District Committee.

Church Trustees, Commissioners Study H St. Plan

Trustees of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church met yesterday with District Commissioners to study and discuss what if any action to take on a proposed traffic channelization that would cut across land in front of the church.

A. C. Oliphant, chairman of the board, said the group met at the church and later at the commissioners' offices. He said they were interested in further information on the final appearance of the project, the length of time for completion, whether it will interfere with the erection of a new building on the present site and if the new flow of traffic will present a hazard for those attending service.

Meanwhile one letter of opposition to the scheme was reported by the governing board. The channelization will open a part of H st. to two-way traffic.

$299,470 Low Bid Approved For New Fairlington School

The Arlington County School Board last night authorized construction of a new 10-room elementary school in north Fairlington, approving a bid of $299,470 for the work.

The bid, lowest of seven, was submitted by the M. Pomponio & Son Construction Co. of Arlington. A formal contract between the company and the Arlington board will be signed later this week.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, it was pointed out, must release 2 acres of adjoining land to the school board to be used as a driveway for the school before work can begin.

Construction will start soon after RFC's clearance is given, and the school is expected to be ready for occupancy within six months.

The school, designed by McLeod and Ferrara, architects, will be located on a 9-acre site at the intersection of 30th and N. Abingdon sts.

The building will be of cinder-block construction with brick facing. Each classroom will have one wall of glass brick and bilateral lighting. The school also will house offices and include a playroom and gymnasium.

The board met at the school's administration offices at 2732 Wilson blvd. in Arlington.

At last night's meeting, Basil M. De Lashmutt, chairman of the Arlington County board refunded $2139.60 to the school board. The money was paid him by the board for surveying prospective Arlington school sites.

In returning the money, which included interest on the entire amount, De Lashmutt said he was prompted by a recent amendment to Virginia statutes which prohibits an official from taking funds for work performed for another government body.

Dairies to Gain If Retroactive Milk Boost Wins

Two Washington dairies stand to gain a retroactive payment for penny milk supplied to District schools in 1946 if the United States District Court of Appeals rulest in favor of such a boost.

A case now pending in the court was begun by the Wakefield Dairy to collect an increase granted by the Agriculture Department on milk prices at that time.

The District Commissioners yesterday announced they would include the Richfield Dairy in any settlement made by the court in the Wakefield case.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said contracts between the Government and the dairies at that time limited increases to those permitted by the Office of Price Administration.

Group of Friends Reports on 2 D. C. Interracial Playgrounds

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

A team of 14 American Friends Service Committee workers today wind up a summer operating two District playgrounds on an interracial basis.

Garfield Park, at 2d, 3d and G sts. se., and Rose Park, at 27th and O sts. nw., were run by an AFSC work camp, with the cooperation and approval of the District Recreation Department.

The object of the program was to prove that interracial recreation in Washington can be natural and harmonious.

On the plus side of the ledger, Work Camp Director Daniel Peacock, 29 year old Indiana Friend, yesterday listed these accomplishments:

1. Every recreation activity, from Mardi Gras parades to softball games has been interracial.

White Participation Rose

2. White participation rose from less than 8 per cent during the first week to more than 13 per cent last week at Garfield Park in an area with an estimated 25 per cent white population, and in a playground once divided into white and colored sections. Garfield represented the more difficult problem. Peacock said there were fewer white children in the Rose Park—Georgetown area. Many of them spent their summers at private camps or summer homes. And Rose Park tennis courts had been operated interracially for many years.

3. Initial neighborhood hostility to the project was substantially overcome. Children of white parents, who signed a petition objecting to the interracial playground before it started, were playing there yesterday.

4. No violence occurred during the summer.

5. Some equipment, candy and supervisory services were voluntarily provided by white parents.

Shortcomings Listed

On the negative side, Peacock freely admitted these shortcomings:

1. Attempts to develop an interracial program in the Garfield wading pool were unsuccessful, although the pool was used interracially at times.

2. Baseball games between white and colored players over 17 had to be abandoned, when they developed into grudge games after the colored team went undefeated for two weeks.

3. White groups sometimes used the Garfield facilities and refused to admit Negroes.

Progress toward ending racial segregation was achieved with difficulty. Garfield and Rose Park workers were consistently approached by white groups who urged abandoning of the project, sometimes threateningly. These groups were most vehement after racial disturbances at Anacostia pool..

Other Difficulties

Drunks, both Negro and white, occasionally interfered with recreational activities. A group of whites from 16 to 18 years old, claiming to be "maintaining the honor of this white playground" often tried to monopolize recreational facilities at Garfield, Peacock said. There was some neighborhood hostility because of the 14 Friend workers only four came from Washington. Expansion and improvement of park facilities by the Friends was not approved by the Recreation Department.

Peacock said the Friends had learned two lessons during the summer. "The younger the children and the more supervision they get," he said, "the easier it is to achieve interracial recreation harmony."

Arlington Teachers Get New Handbook

Arlington schoolteachers will find the answers to questions on anything from field trips and fire drills to teachers' salary scales in a special Teachers' Handbook issued for the first time this year.

The 41-page booklet of rules and information was compiled this summer by a teachers committee, headed by Miss Lillie Massoletti, principal of Stonewall Jackson School, working with Arlington School Superintendent William Early. The booklet is being distributed to teachers this week.

Far broader in scope than the old Teacher's Manual of Administration, the handbook includes several changes and "clarifications" of school policy.

A central accounting system for all funds handled in the school is required and all such accounts should be audited, the rules state. Fund-raising campaigns to purchase school supplies are forbidden, and teachers must clear with the principal before any money is collected for any purpose.

Opening school exercises, consisting of a Bible reading "without comment," followed by the Lord's Prayer and the Flag Salute, are described as a "custom" in the schools by the booklet.

"In any instance, where the religion of the child prohibits participation in these activities, it is urged that the teacher investigate the case tactfully and accept the situation," the booklet adds.

A new health record system—which will require teachers to keep a daily lookout for such symptoms of physical or psychological disturbance as "frequent nose bleeds, undue restlessness, or overindulgence in attention-getting devices"—is also explained in the handbook. Teachers will hold twice-a-year conferences with the school nurse regarding each child, on the basis of this record.

Also mentioned in the book is a new requirement that county school teachers have yearly chest X-rays.

New teacher salary scales which up the maximum for teachers with bachelors' degrees to $4200 yearly (from a previous $4000 maximum). Teachers with masters' degrees now will receive a $4500 maximum salary, instead of the old $4200 top.

The minimum of $2400 for teachers with a B.A. degree remains the same, but teachers boasting an M.A. will now receive a minimum of $2700 instead of last year's $2400.

Polio Death Of Girl 1st Here

The District's first death this year from infantile paralysis was reported yesterday by the health department.

It was the sixth polio death this year in Greater Washington.

Joyce Greer

Two new cases were also recorded in Washington.

Dead is 3-year-old Joyce Greer, one of four daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Greer, 1208 E st. ne. She was admitted to the Children's Hospital one week ago today with bulbar poliomyelitis, and died Sunday.

Greer said his daughter complained of a bad headache on August 20.

The child was taken to Children's Hospital the next day. Dr. Paul Kaufman, assistant chief resident, said she had a fever, and her tonsils, pharynx and ear drums were inflamed. He said she did not have the stiff back or stiff neck usnually associated with polio. Aspirin, sulfa drugs and forced fluids were prescribed and her parents were instructed to bring her back to the hospital two days later.

On Monday, August 22, her father said, she grew much worse and was hardly capable of speech. The next day she improved for a time but her condition later worsened, and on Wednesday she was taken back to the hospital and admitted at once. The admission diagnosis, Dr. Kaufman said, was bulbar poliomyelitis. The child grew progressively worse until her death Sunday.

Greer described his child as normally "very active." She was the youngest of four.

Funeral services will be held in Union, S. C., Thursday afternoon at 3 p. m.

Both new cases were boys from the same family in the 4800 block of 3d st. nw. One was 7½ years; the other, 9 months. There are now a total of 44 cases in the District as compared with 35 one year ago.

Area Polio Record

A total of 114 polio cases, one fatal, have been reported in the Washington area since the first of the year. The breakdown:
District—42.
Prince Georges County—29.
Montgomery County—14.
Arlington County—11.
Alexandria—8.
Fairfax County—8.

Older Driver Retest Plan Referred to Traffic Board

A proposal for reexamination of all District drivers 65 or older on expiration of current licenses was referred to the Traffic Advisory Board yesterday by the District Commissioners.

The plan was outlined by Traffic Director George E. Keneipp as a means of assuring the public that older drivers would not "jeopardize the safety of individuals or property."

Keneipp pointed out that thousands of motorists in the upper age brackets never have undergone an eye test, written examination on traffic regulations or a road test because they obtained licenses before such examinations were required.

Keneipp said a New Jersey survey indicated that 70 per cent of motorists over 65 were defective in some respect from the driving standpoint.

Several octogenarians, including Dr. Earl E. Dudding, former director of the Prisoners' Relief Society, have voiced vigorous opposition to the Keneipp proposal, declaring it is the young men who have the accidents.

Kindler Gave City Its First Symphony

Dr. Hans Kindler, the Dutch-born companion and champion of modern composers who died yesterday at his Rhode Island summer home, established the first symphony orchestra in Washington.

A London newspaper had described him as the "Kreisler of the violoncello" long before he forsook his bow for a baton in 1927. It was in 1931 that he founded the National Symphony Orchestra here, and he continued as its conductor until last year.

Before he was succeeded by 37-year-old Howard Mitchell, the 56-year-old Dr. Kindler weathered a number of storms with his "orchestra of the people." But his career was lauded in America and abroad as one of artistic achievement and excellence.

He had toured much of the world as a 'cellist—both with orchestra and as soloist—before he defied history and the depression to set about building the National Symphony.

He obtained necessary backing from about 100 patrons—several similar efforts by others had failed—and launched an ambitious first-season series of 24 concerts. His undertaking was a surprising success, said one critic, "much to the amazement of his friends, and to his own quiet satisfaction."

A great shock of wavy hair and a vigorous style of conducting without score became his trademarks, while his orchestra became noted for its technical efficiency.

Free summer concerts at the Watergate on the bank of the Potomac were inaugurated in 1935, besides his rigorous schedule of local, national and international concerts.

Dr. Kindler was the center of a controversy last year, when the National Symphony Orchestra Association heard criticism of his ability as a first-rate conductor and hints that the symphony played better under guest conductor and hints that the symphony played better under guest conductors. The association voted 166 to 56, however, to retain him for the eighteenth year of the orchestra's life.

When he laid down his baton last March 16, Dr. Kindler exposed a musical hoax that had been kept a close secret for nearly 18 months. He confessed authorship of "Pacific Nocturne," which had been given its premiere in Baltimore in 1947 under the name of Philip Henry, composer, supposedly a "young naval lieutenant."

DR. HANS KINDLER

Johannes Philippus Hendrik Kindler was born the son of Carel and Jeannette (Hanken) Kindler in Rotterdam January 8, 1893.

From his parents, both musicians, he inherited his love for that form of the arts. He appeared first in public at the age of 10. He made his official debut as soloist with the Berlin Philharmonic in 1914 when he was 17. Until 1914, he appeared with orchestras and in recitals throughout Europe.

World War I caught him in New York, visiting his mother. He got a union card and first citizenship papers in 1914, and became first 'cellist of the Philadelphia Orchestra under Stokowski. He conducted that orchestra in 1927 for his introduction to the baton.

Dr. Kindler's knowledge of and acquaintance with many modern composers made him one of their strong advocates in the orchestral world. He made a practice of presenting their works to his audiences. At times he would conduct the National Symphony in his own compositions.

He received the degree of doctor of music from George Washington University in 1932.

He is survived by his widow, the former Mrs. Persis Myers Hill of Washington, whom he married in May, 1948, at Kensington, Md.; and three children, Mrs. Helen Behrens, who lives in Paris, France, Jan and Don, who live in Maryland. Dr. Kindler was previously married and divorced.

Robina Rae Dies; Headed ARC Museum

In 1929 she was named director of the Red Cross museum and headed both the library and museum until 1948, when she became museum curator and relinquished her library duties.

Her long Red Cross experience and intimate knowledge of the organization's history made her a recognized authority on the subject. The museum she developed was considered one of the most interesting in the country and attracted more than a million visitors before it was closed during the war. Miss Rae was developing plans for its reopening when she died.

Basil O'Connor, ARC president, led other Red Cross leaders in paying tribute to Miss Rae's service. "Her unusual knowledge of and devotion to the Red Cross," he said, "combined to make Miss Rae a model of the career Red Cross worker. The entire organization mourns her passing."

Mary Haworth's Mail

Young Wife Cordially Aids Mother-in-Law In Keeping Daughter, 19, in College, But Girl's Imperious Parasitism Astounds Them

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are doing well financially, but since his father's death six months ago, his mother and sister are less fortunate. The mother, previously sheltered, promptly took a job to keep 19-year-old Sharon in college, and Dolph and I cordially arranged to share the costs of tuition.

In addition, as we can afford, I add to Sharon's wardrobe—little niceties in blouses, sweaters, lingerie, costume jewelry etc.—which I've usually explained as "buys" I couldn't resist when shopping for myself. And as Mrs. B is pretty tired by night and finds it difficult to entertain Sharon's friends as often as she'd like, Dolph and I made her welcome to bring her friends here, provided she gave us a couple of hours' advance notice, to prevent confusion.

Things seemed to be working well—for a while. Sharon seemed appreciative of our interest (although we weren't bidding for "thanks"); and would call before bringing friends here. But lately I noticed a gross change in her; and two weeks ago I came in from shopping and found Sharon and one of her friends playing records, drinking soda, thumbing through our picture album and making themselves quite at home.

They'd let themselves in with a key we've given Mrs. B; and Sharon's first words were, "Well, what did you buy for me today?" I let it pass, undecided whether she was being smart to impress the friend or taking that moment to signify resentment of my gift-giving. The two stayed to dinner without bothering to notify Mrs. B.

Girl Is Lectured by Angry Brother

A FEW NIGHTS later Sharon and a group of friends trooped in, unannounced, at 8:30, and although Dolph and I had dinner guests, Sharon's crowd hogged the occasion with great gusto, to our acute embarrassment; and when our guests left early, Dolph could no longer contain his wrath. He took Sharon to task, then and there, for her rude presumption and their juvenile show-off behavior. She was indignant, of course; and one of the boys got pretty nasty with Dolph, who ended the session by asking them all to leave.

Later, when we explained to Mrs. B, she understood perfectly, and it came out that Sharon has been treating her badly for months, saying she is ashamed of the mother's housekeeping, the old-fashioned furniture, etc., and also throwing up to the mother what Dolph and I have done for her, that the mother isn't able to do.

Since the scene, Sharon hasn't been near us, and when we visit Mrs. B, Sharon flings herself out dramatically and doesn't return until we've left; and also whines and berates the mother when Dolph tries to talk sense to her,—so what now? How can we help Mrs. B, a gentle soul who is getting a dirty deal, we feel; but who is too floored by sorrow and unaccustomed burdens to do anything but cater to Sharon's selfishness, it seems. Your comment on this display of "modern youth" will be appreciated. V. R.

Better Be Just Than Generous

DEAR V. R.: This preposterous situation brings to mind a comment made by one of Ghandi's disciples, who said, "He taught us to be just, when it is so much easier to be generous." It is recorded in Vincent Sheean's "Lead Kindly Light" (Random House publishers), a peerless study of Ghandi's life, religion and work.

That comment serves to illuminate the family's mistake with Sharon of recent months; and the adults who have been coddling her, instead of schooling her in constructive adjustment to lean circumstances, are more concerned with maintaining family "face," per snob values, than in bringing her character to maturity. And as Ghandi, great saint of our age, confidently stated near the end of his days, the fruits of wrong action (though innocently pursued) are inevitably calamitous. One may suppose this truth applies to individual experience as well as "world history."

Far less devotion is required to deal either leniently or with repressive severity, than in justly governing the growth of a child; and doubtless Sharon's mother is wanly taking the path of least resistance in catering lavishly to Sharon's latter-day arrant selfishness. In that she is wrong; thus the basic corrective is (1) to concede her mistake, instead of making sentimental excuse and accepting sentimental condolence for it; and (2) then firmly refuse to be an "accessory" to Sharon's disposition to evade duties she should perform in the circumstances.

Incidentally, Sharon is on the defensive with everyone, including her own conscience, about her parasitism and sham affluence in college society; and this is making her defiantly unstable. In all probability she would be much happier and better behaved, once she had made the adjustment, if she were taken out of college and put to work, to earn her salt and develop valid social competence. That's the "specific" I recommend to bring her out of her current tailspin. M. H.

Gladys Collins Is Engaged

Gen. Joseph Lawton Collins, Chief of Staff of the Army, and Mrs. Collins, announce the engagement of their daughter, Gladys May, to Jerome Joseph Stenger, jr., son of J. J. Stenger of East Falls Church, Va., and the late Mrs. Stenger.

The wedding is planned for late fall.

Since her graduation from Vassar College in 1946, Miss Collins has been pursuing her career in child guidance. She has worked as a teacher at the Remedial Education Center, as a pyschologist at Children's House and as an assistant in psychology at the Child Center at Catholic University. Mr. Stenger is taking graduate work in political science at Catholic University and he also is associated with an agency of the National Security Council. During the war he served in the headquarters of the Army Strategic Air Forces and of the Thirteenth Air Force. He was graduated with honors from Georgetown University in 1948.

Adm. Thomas Says Farewell

A farewell reception was given yesterday in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel in honor of Rear Admiral William N. Thomas and Mrs. Thomas.

Host and hostesses for the party were the Navy chaplains and their wives stationed in the Washington area.

In the receiving line with Chaplain and Mrs. Thomas were Chaplain Elmer Bosserman, new public information officer of the Chaplain Corps, and Mrs. Bosserman, recently arrived from Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. A colorful note at yesterday's party were the leis worn by Admiral and Mrs. Thomas, sent to them by air from Hawaii by friends of the popular couple. Also, the centerpiece of exotic Hawaiian flowers, decorating the long tea table, was flown here from the islands.

Two gifts were presented to Admiral and Mrs. Thomas, one an engraved guest book in which guests at the tea wrote their names. The other was a leather folder containing telegrams and over 300 letters from people in all walks of life, from many parts of the globe, sending good wishes to one of the best-loved chaplains of the United States Navy, who after 31 years of service is retiring this week.

When Admiral and Mrs. Thomas leave Washington next week they will go to Lake Junaluska, N. C., where they have purchased a house and where they will make their home. Their son, John Thomas, will complete his term at the University of Virginia going South to his family for vacation. Another son, Dr. William N. Thomas, jr., will remain in the Capital to complete his course in radiology.

Gift Service About Wrapping

I am interested in the gift-wrapping business, such as the department stores have. I have had some experience in fancy wrappings and my packages are attractive. I am a housewife and have a baby, and would like to conduct such a business from my home. I thought I might be able to do it at home for a suburban store. Could you offer any suggestions? G. W.

You would be better able to work out this type of an arrangement with suburban stores, it seems to me, if you could manage to do it right at the store a few hours each day. As I see it, there are two problems attendant to doing such work in your home. The first problem is the time it would take to pick up packages, wrap and return them. Twenty-four hours would seem to be the minimum, and most customers wanting a package "fancied" wouldn't have that much time. The second problem would be insuring the contents of the packagese while you had them.

If you live in or near a heavily populated area such as a large apartment development, you may be able to work up such a business on a small scale by posting notices on the apartment or drug store bulletin boards in your area. You might also get permission to post attractive notices in gift departments of neighborhood stores to advertise your skill. Persons who dislike package wrapping or who feel they are all thumbs at it, would probably be glad to drive or walk a few blocks to have the chore done for them.

Could you tell me if I need a license for day care of one or two children of working mothers? If so, what kind is it? I should like to care for two children of 3 or 4 years of age, since I have a child of my own of that age. We have a fine fenced-in yard and ample facilities to take good care of them. Also, would you tell me a fair price to charge? All that I have heard about are nurseries and schools, which would naturally charge more than I. E. G. H.

Yes, you do need a license. As an Arlington resident, you would go to Mrs. Hazel Moore, Child Care Councilor, Arlington County Court House, to make application for the license. She will provide you with the blank and inspect your home for safety. When the inspection is over, she sends your application to the State office which issues the license. However, before the license is issued, a representative from the State office will call upon you to get character references, arrange for a medical examination for you, etc. The entire procedure takes about a month.

Mrs. Moore tells me that $10 to $12.50 is the usual rate charged for day care and $15.00 to $17.50 a week for full time care. The exact amount charged is decided by the age of the child.

Can you tell me how to paper and/or paint a small square room to make it appear larger? S. J. S.

You can make a room appear larger by painting it with light colors. Painting the woodwork the same color as the walls also gives spaciousness to the room. When using wallpaper to give a room size choose it in light colors with small not-too-prominent patterns. You can further add to the feeling of spaciousness by using small furniture, avoiding, a cluttered look, laying the carpet from wall to wall, using draperies the same color or value as the walls and using many mirrors.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

Infant 'Dropsy'

"I guess he's just got the dropsy" is the way some people explain a young child's delight in dropping toys, spoons, or other articles from his play pen or high chair.

At first, it's likely to be amusing. Mother, father, or brother and sisters enjoy picking things up and handing them back. After a bit, however, the trick may become tiresome. Sometimes the baby is scolded and made to feel that he is "bad." Mother or father feels he should be trained not to continue the constant dropping.

Apparently young babies get a "kick" out of seeing things disappear. To have objects picked up is especially thrilling and they're ready to "go through the act" all over again.

There are several ways of dealing with the situation. Now and again the grown-up may enjoy the game of dropping and picking up. There's no harm either in ignoring the behavior at times. The youngster will learn that he can't always expect things returned. A compromise measure is to tie strings to the objects he likes to drop. Before long he will learn how to retrieve them. In any case there is no point in making a "moral issue" of "dropsy." It's a perfectly natural sort of behavior.

Cooking Cues

If you find you do not have enough grease to fry the croquettes in deep fat, do not spoil them by trying. Put the croquettes in a greased pan and bake in a hot oven turning so they are browned all over. You will find them more digestible too.

It is wise to favor dad when catering for the evening meal, rather than the children. You can serve them things you feel they should have at lunch time and if they eat a slim dinner it will make no difference. It is a meal of relaxation for father and the things he likes best should predominate.

Save the water left from cooking vegetables and use it in the gravy that is to accompany fried chicken. Or add it to a soup.

Tobé Says—

New Suit Fashion —The Balenciaga

I wish I could think up a good one-word description of this important new suit fashion because "balenciaga" is quite a mouthful to say.

It's the new type of dressmaker suit that was first brought out by Balenciaga in Paris three years ago—nipped in at the waistline and flaring slightly at the hips over a slender skirt. Actually the jacket seems to stand away from the hips—because it is slightly stiffened by a special interlining.

In small patterned worsteds, and worn with a handsome mink stole, the Balneciaga suit is certainly the smartest early fall costume a woman can have.

First Married Year Time of Dissension For Newlyweds

Newlyweds should expect to disagree, and even fight, during the first year of marriage, according to Jacques Bacal, New York lawyer and expert in family relations. In an article in the current issue of Look magazine, Mr. Bacal states that conflicts are normal during the first year of marriage, and are better in the long run than brooding over grievances in an effort to avoid "a scene."

Calling the first the most dangerous year of marriage, Mr. Bacal believes that the foundation of most divorces is laid during those early months. One of the hardest tests a young couple must face, he says, is the reality of everyday living after the romantic excitement and financial extravagance of courtship. As an antidote, a realistic budget worked out well in advance of the wedding bells can be a great help, he claims.

In-laws come in for their share of "Dutch Uncle" advice from Mr. Bacal. However well-meaning, parents who offer too much advice can be a serious hazard to their children.

Let Child Gain Experience In Making His Own Decisions

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

THE parent who tries to solve all of her children's problems is depriving them of experiences that they need. Only the mentally helpless need to have their thinking done for them. But parents, obsessed with the belief that they know best may try to make all the decisions, come to all the conclusions.

Either children submit or they rebel. If they submit they fail to grow in independence, if they do not there is constant friction and conflict.

Beginning as early as the second year children should have some experience in making decisions. They will be trivial ones; such as, what suit to put on, whether to play in or outdoors or with or without playmates. But, they educate the child in thinking about what he wants to do and then show him the results of his decisions.

All children, even babies, should have the privilege of deciding whether they want food and how much they want. They grow very adept at making these decisions and these pave the way for others.

As the child grows the perplexing situations which confront him multiply. These may have to do with money, what to do with his allowance, save it, spend it, or work for more.

They will certainly have to do with playmates. "Can I go to the circus with Donny?" the child asks. The answer may be yes, but it may be qualified, "If you go to the circus then you can't go to the movie this week, for you won't have any money." There is the decision to be made and it should not be made easier for the child by saying, "Oh, go on, I'll give you the money for the movie." That seems like kindness but it deprives the child of the exercise of judgment and puts him in a position to want his own way at all times no matter what the cost in money or inconvenience to others.

Sometimes, it is harder for the mother to allow the child the privilege of deciding than it is to do it for him. But if it is his future well-being she thinks important, then she must school herself to let him muddle through.

She must keep in mind, though, that she cannot saddle the child with decisions too important for him. There are some things the mother must decide, if the child's health, physical or moral, is at stake. No mother allows her child to jump out of the window just to prove to him that he will be hurt. Neither does she allow him to decide about acts which in her wisdom and experience she knows to be wrong.

But, the managerial mother who moves her children about as if they were pawns can thank herself if her children grow up to be weaklings who never have the courage to make up their own minds, for fear they may make a mistake.

HAVE you been wondering about the meaning of the lovely blue-and-sand-colored murals on Fan and Bill's walls? My curiosity piqued, I studied them at length. They are mystical, even beautiful, but disturbingly vague as to intent. One huge outline includes a dead tree stump soaking its roots in a creek in the middle of a desert. Nearby is a deserted castle by the side of a road. And, most important of all, a feast complete with candelabra piled high on the tree stump.

This explanation was given me: "Each represents things without being so specific that it knocks you in the head. In other words, as you look at them, you don't know what you're looking at."

The one of stumps and castles proves, I was told, "that life never dies. No matter what happens, eating is the process to renew life." The dead stump, they say, is blossoming into life also (a fact which had escaped me").

Each mural stands for a food; milk, meat, bread, etc. Helena Markley designed them (while redoing the restaurant) in an attempt to please everyone. Sea, sand, castles, and shipwrecks—all are designed so that they seem mystic if you're a mystic. But if you are a person of no mystic qualities, they simply won't annoy you.

BOB Knight, affable orchestra leader at the Hotel 2400's Lounge Riviera, describes his new fall thrush, but withholds her name. His description: "A beautiful voice, sings from her heart, and really sings the story. She's a Washington girl and has been around here in other clubs."

I'm guessing she is one dark haired, quiet young and slender Washingtonian—Betty Madigan, television star.

She'll begin September 17, when the Lounge Riviera has its fall opening. In addition there will be specialties and novelties, and a couple of famous guests from New York. Also, a local university choral group. Bob Knight has written a song for the occasion—the Welcome Song.

The Lounge is a large place, with a good sized dance floor compared to the postage stamps that usually pass as ample. It's dimly lighted and the band is not too loud. It's strictly a dance band. No tricks, no blaring. Bob has a double neck electric guitar, with special tunings, which is velvet-smooth, and the band follows his style.

Film Houses Seen Using Television

By the United Press

The Federal Communications Commission was told yesterday that the day may come when big city moviegoers will view their Hollywood favorites in plush theaters served entirely by television.

The Society of Motion Picture Engineers told the commission it is "quite possible" that such television theaters may need up to 60 channels of the television band in metropolitan areas. It did not say how many theaters that would serve.

"Theater television will endeavor to offer material paralleling in a general fashion that presented by the legitimate theater, radio and motion pictures but adding the important element of immediacy," the engineers said in a statement filed with the commission.

The FCC, which must decide how many television channels to parcel out for various purposes, recently invited the society to submit its views in anticipation of next month's hearings on color television and the proposed allocation of channels.

The engineers admitted that there are no facilities now available which would be adequae for television theaters, but pointed out that it some day may become a booming business.

Iceland Ratifies U. N. Genocide Pact

Lake Success, N. Y., Aug. 30 (AP).—Iceland today became the fourth nation to register with the United Nations its ratification of the convention against genocide — the mass destruction of national, religious or racial groups.

The convention, which has been signed by 28 nations, will become effective when 20 have ratified it.

D. C. to Open Parking Lot Bids Sept. 14

Bids will be opened September 14 at 2 p. m. on two-year leases for operation of a parking lot on land adjoining the Municipal Center.

The Commissioners announced yesterday that leases will begin October 1 for use of 107,650 square feet located in the area bounded by Indiana ave., 6th and C sts. and the Municipal Center plaza.

Two hundred car spaces on the tract will be reserved for autos belonging to District government employes for which a rent not to exceed $5 a month will be charged.

The lessee may conduct a gasoline and auto service station on the site fronting on Indiana ave., where a station was previously located.

The H. L. Rust Co., 1001 15th st. nw., will act as the agent for the District in collecting rents. The District will reserve the right to cancel the lease on 30 days notice if the area is required for Federal or District use.

The lot is expected to accommodate about 100 cars in addition to the city workers' vehicles.

City Hall Safe Cracked

Chicago, Aug. 30 (UP).—A pair of gunmen tied up two guards in the City Hall today, cracked a vault in the office of the Municipal Court clerk three floors above the police commissioner's office, and fled with $125.

Early Shots For Whooping Cough Urged

(This is the third of a series of six articles prepared by Dr. George C. Ruhland, health officer of the District of Columbia, on the immunization of children against disease as schooldays approach once again).

By Dr. George C. Ruhland

In hundreds of homes throughout Washington whooping cough is still a dread childhood disease that must be endured. Many parents have discovered, too late, that whooping cough carries off more tiny babies than all the rest of the childhood diseases combined.

In Washington in the five-year period—1940 to 1944—there was an average of 600 cases of whooping cough reported, with an average of 15 deaths, while from 1945 to 1947 there was an average of 472 cases reported, with an average of 3 deaths, while from 1945 there were 243 cases reported, with no deaths.

The best method of providing protection against this disease is to immunize by means of injections. It is only useful several months in advance of exposure.

All children should be immunized early in infancy, because the mortality rate from whooping cough is highest during this period. The injections should be started at 3 or 4 months of age. Whenever after the original immunization children are in close contact with whooping cough cases they should receive additional protection by means of a booster dose of vaccine.

The child has a considerable degree of protection for many months or years following administration of the vaccine. The child is able by means of a booster dose at any time to step up his immunity if exposed to whooping cough cases or if in the midst of an epidemic.

A physician in his office or at your home, or in one of the Health Department's clinics.

Immunization clinics at Polk Health Center, 7th and P sts. nw., will be open at 3 p. m. every Tuesday.

The Southwest Health Center immunization clinic is open on Wednesdays at 3 p. m.

Infants and preschool children who are not under the care of a private physician should register for health supervision, which includes immunizations in the Health Department's child welfare clinics.

Tomorrow: Tetanus.

Why They Drive That Way

Woman Judge Disputes Idea Sex Affects Good Driving

(Some opinions on men drivers by Judge Nadine L. Gallagher of Municipal Court.)

(Concluding a report on women drivers written by Bob Johnson and Muriel Barnett of the Los Angeles Mirror. Based on observations of Edwin D. Fletcher, California bachelor and State driving examiner.)

Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Sex may be a fertile field for Kinsey but it has nothing—absolutely nothing—to do with making a good driver or a bad driver.

Who says so? Municipal Court Judge Nadine L. Gallagher does and she has her reasons.

Take the stand, please, Judge Gallagher.

Men have a tendency to drive faster than women, you say, thus creating a speed hazard. Men are more aggressive than women and this is reflected in their driving.

In Traffic Court, Judge Gallagher is confronted with many more men drivers, she says.

Blamed on Drunken Male

"Numerous cases have come before me," Judge Gallagher says, "in which women drivers have been charged with driving without a permit. In many of the cases, after sifting the facts, it has been found that the woman was driving home an intoxicated husband or boy friend."

In Judge Gallagher's experience, this was the topper in such cases:

A woman was arrested for driving without a permit. Her boy friend was, ahem — under the weather. He was charged with permitting an unlicensed driver to operate his car.

What happened? The boy friend paid his own collateral and left his lady friend to spend the night in the cooler. It must have been the end of a beautiful friendship.

Women More Conservative

As Judge Gallagher sees it, it is a woman's nature to be conservative in all things, including driving.

"She doesn't want to pay out money on busted fenders," says the judge. "She'd rather buy a new hat."

Man or woman, she declares, good driving is a matter of concentration.

Even so, Judge Gallagher would rather ride in a car driven by a woman.

"I don't like to drive fast," she explains, "and women as a rule usually drive slower than men."

Why is this so? Judge Gallagher believes it is because the male animal is by nature impatient.

When Boys Meet Girls

"Women," says she, "are traditionally the patient sex."

And how about the male motorist with the roving eye? Ah yes, Judge Gallagher has had experience with this species.

In one traffic case which came before her recently, the evidence brought out that that boys in one of the cars involved had swept into the curb to swap repartee with two winsome dolls who were walking on the sidewalk.

The young male driver pulled away from the curb, apparently his eyes still glued to the girls. Accident.

Boys meet girls. Bang bang.

But, according to the Court of Appeals (if we may interpret broadly), the male leg looker-at isn't guilty unless he gets a good look and it registers in his mind.

In the case of a witness, the Appeals Court once held that "he may not merely look; he must look observantly and with effect."

And if you find (you men drivers) that you're looking too observantly, try blinders.

Sex may be a fertile field for Kinsey but it has nothing—absolutely nothing—to do with making a good driver or a bad driver.

Cakes, doctors and children, according to one expert, Edwin D. Fletcher, senior examiner of California's State Department of Motor Vehicles.

This is an observation based on facts on motor accidents involving women and stemming directly from such household chores as marketing.

"Women put their purchases, maybe a cake, on the car seat," Fletcher observes. "When they make a sudden stop they must choose in a second between saving the cake and saving the car.

"Most women save the cake. They save the cake but plow into the car or pedestrian in their path."

Fletcher believes traffic dangers would be lessened if women followed a few safety rules peculiar to their place in life. He has evolved these rules after 12 years of research on driving habits.

Would "Belt in" Children

One is to eliminate such worries as the cake on the seat. He suggests that women place market purchases on the floor or in a box where no sudden movement of the car will damage them. And the same treatment for children. They can't be stuck in a box, of course.

The smaller children, however can be "belted" into special inexpensive car seats and the larger ones can be confined to the back seat (after safety locking the rear doors so they can't open them).

"Worry over children standing in the front seat causes many accidents," Fletcher declares. "And there is always the danger that the children will be the principal victims of an accident."

Visiting the doctor is another pitfall of the modern woman driver, according to Fletcher. He recommends that women go by taxi or let someone drive them when they are visiting the doctor.

Beware of Window Shopping

"Certain cold shots," he says, "are known to affect side vision and ability to judge distances or to time moving objects. Sulfa is notorious for this.

"Recently a woman drove to her doctor's for a minor injection in the thigh. After leaving his office she got as far as the first "stop" street and had a wreck. The shot had temporarily paralyzed her leg."

Many of the capers the ladies cut with a car can be caused by a skirt too tight for body freedom or heels too high for braking.

But women do have some driving habits that are beyond explaining, Fletcher's accident studies reveal. One is window shopping from a car.

"A man who does not keep his eyes on the traffic ahead usually is looking at some woman on the sidewalk," Fletcher observes. "A woman driver, on the other hand, steals little glances into the shop windows."

Cigarette Sucking Dangerous

Smoking while driving causes women drivers trouble. Most women can stir the oatmeal, leaf through a propped magazine and tie junior's big at the same time. But they have touble managing a cigarette while steering, shifting and braking.

Fletcher, holder of a master's degree in psychology, suspects their coordination is imperiled by a secret fear of setting fire to the upholstery.

He also has discovered one reason why women repeatedly are accused of giving improper hand signals. In many cases, he finds, the height of the car seat is to blame.

"If you are sitting too low your left-turn signal becomes a right-turn signal because you can't get your arm down level," he says.

All in all, Fletcher concludes, women have more things to overcome in driving than men.

"But in spite of all things," he admits, "women show up far less than men as accident repeaters and habitual traffic violators.

"Many of the weaknesses of women drivers are shared by men. Many accidents involving women drivers can be attributed directly to vanity, but a man was arrested in Alameda the other day for shaving with an electric razor on his way to work."

The bitter truth is, Fletcher sums up—a lot of men are "women driver's," too.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Keeping Us Awake Costs Building Contractor Time-and-a-Half

"Why is it," asks Mel White of 704 3d st. nw., "that an inoffensive inebriate singing 'Sweet Adeline' is considered a disturber of the peace—yet nocturnal industrial noises are not?"

Mel refers particularly to builders who work their crews or machinery at night, or on weekends or holidays—in short, when people are trying to rest and perhaps sleep.

For the benefit of those who have been similarly annoyed, I investigated — and found that John Q. Citizen has some rights.

All construction work in the District (except Federal projects) is under the jurisdiction of local regulations. Anybody who wants to work overtime, or on weekends or holidays, must ask the Central Permit Bureau for an okay.

The bureau sends the request along to the Commissioners, who examine the reasons cited by the builder, and determine whether or not it is in the public interest to issue the necessary permission.

If the Commisioners say "yes," a permit is issued, and the local police precinct notified. Anybody who is being disturbed by building noises can inquire at his neighborhood precinct whether the builder is cheating, or within his rights.

However, none of the foregoing applies to Uncle Sam, who makes his own rules. If District Liner White has been annoyed by the work on the GAO building in his neighborhood, there's nothing he can do except stuff his ears with cotton.

But the contractor on the project says that there has only been one weekend on which his crew worked overtime—and that was necessitated by a delay that grew out of recent wage negotiations with building trades unions.

If they're pouring concrete, they have to finish up before knocking off—and that sometimes runs a few minutes past the usual quitting whistle. And the pumps must be kept going all night when it rains. But otherwise, the answer is:

"It costs money to work a crew overtime. We don't like it, either."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Eighteen-month-old pup from aristocratic mother; part cocker, good with children." (Falls Church 0989 or 1475.)

"Mother cat and four healthy, adorable Maltese kittens; mother is good mouser." (Otis 8286.)

"Pure white kittens with green eyes; housebroken, playful and affectionate." (District 7955.)

THERE MUST BE AN EXPLANATION

NBC Newsman Robert McCormick stumps me with a question based on a recent Washington Post news item.

We said that Gilmore D. Clarke, chairman of the Fine Arts Commission, had served the commission "by successive four-year appointments, for 18 years." His most recent term expired in March.

All Bob wants to know is: "How did those successive four-year appointments add up to 18 years?"

SUGGESTION BOX

Philip Retz of 1783 Lanier pl. nw. thinks that local traffic could be speeded up quite a bit if right turns were permitted on the "red" at more intersections.

MISCELLANY

Several correspondents report that the Pentagon soup is no longer too salty, but one guy growls: "Now I gotta add salt myself. Why don't you keep out of things that don't concern you?" . . . Kathleen Chaimas wonders whether ghosts are like people, and go around asking their friends: "Have you heard about my apparition?" . . . Stuart Godwin, jr., of 1869 Mintwood pl. nw., thinks we've invented a new word because a recent classified ad described a house as "immaulate"—which the proofreading wasn't, in that instance . . . Edie Lewis of 506 11th st. nw. is similarly perplexed by a wool-gathering proofreader who didn't object to "Mr." Fuselier having a baby in one of our recent news stories . . . C. R. Minot of 425 D st. se. points out that one of the reasons Capital Transit doesn't always maintain its schedule is that people at bus and streetcar stops fail to signal the operator to keep going when they're waiting for some other route . . . B. J. Casassa of 1446 Irving st. nw. has the answer to my question: "How can I keep my pipe tobacco from becoming too soggy in humid weather?" The Casassa Candy Co. uses 3-ounce bags of Desiccite Dehydrating Agent No. 25 (Filterol Corp., 634 S. Spring st., Los Angeles, 14, Calif.) to keep its candy fresh in the summertime . . . And James A. Elliot of 8521 Glenview ave., Takoma Park, Md., has an even simpler suggestion: Just leave most of your tobacco supply in its original airtight pound tin; put your current supply in a rubber pouch . . . Those mysterious white lines on the street just past the north end of Highway Bridge are paint samples being tested by our highway engineers. The type that holds up best will be used for lane lines on District streets.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

F. J. Acosta of 2814 31st st. se. wonders whether there was ever a cigarette that wasn't "mild," or a musical director who wasn't "distinguished."

Or, for that matter, has there ever been a television receiver with a small screen?

Every time I'm late and take a cab to work instead of a streetcar, I wonder how many others do the same thing, and whether this makes any difference to Capital Transit's revenues.

Vice President E. C. Giddings says there is a slight difference between the number of passengers hauled in the morning and evening rush hours — but it doesn't amount to much. Apparently we morning laggards are in the minority.

However, there is one marked difference between morning and evening transit requirements: Capital Transit uses 40 additional streetcars (but 30 fewer buses) at night.

Why? Giddings shrugs and says "You tell us. We've never been able to figure it out." Then as an afterthought, he adds:

"Years ago, statistics were published proving that more people went from Brooklyn to New York each morning than returned from New York to Brooklyn each evening. Maybe this is a similar situation."

Oh, heavens no. Any New Yorker can explain why emigres from Brooklyn would be loath to return.

Iran Putting on Loan Squeeze

By Robert S. Allen

The Iranian government is attempting a new backstage squeeze for a big United States handout.

It is a demand for a 250-million-dollar World Bank loan.

Robert S. Allen

The proposal was sprung by A. H. Ebtehaj, head of the Iranian state bank and a governor of the World Bank. He is due here next month for a meeting of bank governors.

Meanwhile, Ebtehaj is trying to put on the heat in Tehran. He has told United States officials there that Iran is entitled to the same kind of monetary and military aid the United States is giving Turkey and Greece.

He concluded one conversation with the haughty observation that if such assistance is not forthcoming "The United States can go to hell."

Actually, a large flow of United States dollars is pouring into Iran. American oil interests are paying out millions monthly, and the United States Government is spending large sums. It has just completed a $500,000 engineering survey for Iran.

Strained Relations

Behind-the-scenes diplomatic relations between the United States and Iran are at the lowest ebb since the '20's, when the State Department deported a member of the Iranian legation for smuggling opium.

Curious aspect of the current strained relations is that Shah Mohammed Riza Pahlevi is making a state visit to Washington this fall. His mother and several other members of his family already are in the United States. Authorities are at a loss as to the reason for Iranian gruffness.

Iran put on a huff last month at the turndown of an opium scheme.

Famine conditions exist in Azerbaijan, northwest Iranian province. Despite large oil royalties, Iran asked the United States for 200,000 tons of free grain. When that was refused, Iran proposed to swap opium for the wheat.

U. S. Narcotics Commissioner Harry Anslinger vehemently objected.

He cited the fact that Iran is the most flagrant exporter of illegal opium in the world, and has persistently defied United Nations attempts to curb this traffic. Also, that due to these violations, the United States ceased buying medicinal opium from Iran. Anslinger's protests blocked the swap scheme.

Public Housing Pal

But Cox sang another tune the other day at the Public Housing Administration.

Officials of Albany, Ga., his home town, appeared at PHA to sign up for a housing project under the new act. Albany is the first small town to get such a development. And right up in front to get his picture and name in the papers was Cox—who had so violently fought the legislation.

'5-Percenters'

Commerce Secretary Charles Sawyer's announcement that his field offices will provide businessmen with information on Government contracts free of charge is causing no concern to "5-percenters." Reason is, the intricacies of Government procurement are so complex that only an insider can make any headway against them. All big corporations have their own business representatives in Washington and hundreds of other concerns employ part-time agents. Most of them are legitimate contact men who make no claims to inside influence.

All the publicity given "5-percenters" has boomed their business.

CIO Suit Hits State Control Over Rentals

The national rent law provision giving States power to substitute their own rent control measures for Federal regulation was challenged yesterday in a District Court suit.

The test to declare the provision unconstitutional was brought by Edith Shimek of Milwaukee, Wis. The fight against the so-called "home-rule" decontrol is backed by the CIO's national housing committee, according to Attorney Benjamin C. Sigal, through whom the suit was filed.

District court is asked to set up a three-judge tribunal to determine the measure's constitutionality. Also requested is an injunction to prevent removal of Federal control in Wisconsin.

Federal Housing Expediter Tighe Woods is named defendant in the action.

San Francisco, Aug. 30 (AP).—A fire causing an estimated four million dollar loss, raged for six hours today through a grocery warehouse of Safeway Stores, Inc., at Army and Evans sts.

G. H. Branlund, division manager, said the building was worth $1,500,000. He estimated the value of groceries destroyed at around three million dollars.

Dynamite Ship Smoker Is Jailed for 180 Days

Los Angeles, Aug. 30 (AP).—Longshoreman Jose Venegas, 48, was only smoking a cigarette, but the judge gave him 180 days in jail.

The reason: He was smoking aboard a ship, the freighter Santa Juana, loaded with 7660 cases of dynamite, 2000 kegs of blasting powder and 14 cases of dynamite caps.
